

Smprottelows

$$
S_{K E T C H}
$$

of the Northern Part of A $\mathbf{F}$ R C C E.chithiting the geographical informetion Collected by

The African Association. Compiled by J. Remnell. 1790.

KOROROFA
$\qquad$
Grogmphic Milles
$\qquad$

$\qquad$ Ropertad Aloures
Wrahomesion frates 1) Conde Dever - Nathencitim fatatar - Cänce.erflgam

PROCEEDINGS

AFRICAN ASSOCIATION.
гэисазооля
thevocitater

PROCEEDINGS

of
THE ASSOCIATION

PROMOTING THE DISCOVERY

INTERIOR PARTS OF AFRICA.

LONDON:

PRINTED BY C. MACRAE, PRINTER TO THE ASSOCIATION。

LIST OF THE MEMBERS

OFTHE

ASSOCIATION.

A
The countefs of Ailefbury
Rt.Hon. H. Addington, Speaker of the Houfe of Commons

B
Duke of Buccleugh
Earl of Buckinghamfhire
Earl of Bute
Earl of Briftol
Sir J. Banks, Bart. P. R. S.
Lady Belmore
Robert Barclay, Efq.
Henry Beaufoy, Efq. M.P.
Mark Beaufoy, Efq.
John Beaufoy, Efq.
Richard Henry Bennet, Efq.
Ifaac H. Browne, Efq. M.P. Robert Barclay, Efq. M.P.

C
Lord Carysfort
Earl of Cholmondeley
Sir H. G. Calthorpe, Bart. M. P.
General Conway
John Call, Efq. M.P.
Mrs. Child
Thomas Coutts, Efq.
John Campbell, Efq. M. P.

D

Lord Daer
Sir John Dick, Bart.
Wm. Drake, Jun. Efq. M.P.

E

Earl of Exeter
G. N. Edwards, Efq. M.P.

| F | L |
| :---: | :---: |
| Earl of Fife | Lord Loughborough |
| Sir A. Ferguffon, Bart. M.P. | Bifhop of Landaff |
| Sir William Fordyce, Bart. | Wilfred Lawfon, Efq. |
| Colonel Fullarton, M.P. | Dr. Lettfom |
| G | William Ludlam, Efq. |
| Duke of Grafton | M |
| Earl of Gainfborough | Earl of Moira |
| Earl of Galloway | Lord Middleton |
| Edward Gibbon, Efq. | Sir Charles Middleton, Bart. |
| Dr. Gifborne | Sir William Mufgrave, Bart. |
| George Goftling, Efq. | William Marfden, Efq. |
| George Gomm, Efq. | Rev. Dr. Marton |
| H | Paul Le Mefurier, Efq. M.P. |
| Earl of Huntingdon | Charles Miller, Efq.  James Martin, Efq. M.P |
| Lord Hawke | James Martin, Efq. M.P. |
| Mr. Profeffor Harwood | N |
| Sir John Hort, Bart. |  |
| John Hunter, Efq. | Duke of Northumberland |
| Henry Hoare, Efq. | Richard Neave, Efq. |
| Charles Hoare, Eff. | The Hon. F. North |
| Henry H. Hoare, Efq. | P |
| K | John Peachy, Eff. M.P. |
| Whithed Keene, Eff. M.P. | W. Pulteney, Efq. M.P. |

C. A. Pelham, Efq. M.P.
W. M. Pitt, Efq. M.P.

John Parke, Efq.

R

Earl of Radnor
Lord Rawdon
Lieut. Gen. Rainsford

S
Lord Sheffield
Sir John Sinclair, Bart. M.P.
Sir John Stepney, Bart.
John Stanley, Efq.
Mr. Stuart
Hugh Scott, Efq.
John Simmons, Efq.
William Smith, Efq. M.P.
Richard Stonehewer, Efq. Hans Sloane, Efq. M.P.

T

Greaves Townley, Efq.
Robert Thornton, Efq. M. P.

V

Benjamin Vaughan, Efq.

W
Earl of Wycombe
Sir Godfrey Webfter, Bart.
William Watfon, Efq.
SamuelWhitebread, Efq. M. P.
Wm. Wilberforce, Efq. M.P.
William Winch, Efq.
Jofiah Wedgewood, Efq. John Wilkinfon, Efq.

Y

Philip Yorke, Efq. M.P.

CONTENTS.

PAGE
Introduction ..... I
Plan of the Alociation ..... 2
CHAPTER I.
Proceedings of the Affociation, from the Time of its Efablijbment, to that of the Departure of Mr. Ledyard ..... 13
CHAPTER II.
Mr. Ledy ard's Arrival at Cairo.-His Remarks on the Inbabitants, Eic.-His Death and CbaraEker ..... 19
CHAPTER III.
Arrival of Mr, Lucas at Tripoli.-His Reception by the Bafiaw.-His fourney to Mefurata with the Sbereefs Fourwad and Imbammed.-His Mode of obtaining from the latter an Account of his Travelsin the Interior Countries of Africa.-His Return to England . . . . 43
INTRODUCTION TO CHAPTER IV.
The Sbereef Inbbammed's Information confirmed by the Governor of Me- furata and Ben Alli the Moor ..... 75
CHAPTER IV.
Rout from Mefurata.- Enumeration of the principal Towns of Fezzan.- Account of its Climate and principal Productions.-Defcription ofthe Manners, Relizion, and Government of its People-Their Reve-mue, Aliminijeration of Juftice, and Military Force..... . . . . . . 81
CHAPTER V.
Mode of Travelling in Africa ..... 87
CHAPTER VI.
General Remarks on the Empires of Bornou and Cafbna.-Rout from Mourzouk to Bornou.—Climate of Bornou.-Complexion, Drefs, and Food of the Inbabitants-Their Mode of Building-Their Language, Government, Military Force, Manners, and Trade. ..... 125
CHAPTER VII.
Rout from Mourzouk to Cafbna.-Boundaries of the Empire.-Its Language, Currency, and Trade ..... 161
CHAPTER VIII.
Countries South of the Niger ..... 173

CHAPTER IX.

> General View of the Trade from Fezzan to Tripoli, Bornou, Cafbna, and the Countries on the South of the Niger . . . . . . . . . . I8I

CHAPTER X.

Rout from Mourzouk to Grand Cairo, according to Hadgee Abdalab Benmileitan, the prefent Governor of Mefurata . . . . . . . . . . . . I93

CHAPTER XI.
Conclufions fuggefted by the preceding Narrative . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 199
CHAPTER XII.
Congtuction of the Map of Africa . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 2 II

ERRATA.

INTRODUCTION.

The Narrative of the Proceedings of the Society that was formed in the year 1788, for the purpofe of Promoting the Difcovery of the Inland Diftricts of Africa, was written, at the requeft of his Colleagues, by one of the Members of the Committee of that Association; and is now printed at the defire, and for the ufe of the Society : but as it may alfo be read by perfons unacquainted with the Origin and Object of the Undertaking to which it relates, the following Paper, as defcriptive of both, is republifhed for their information.

P L A N OETHE  ASSOCIATION.

OF the objects of inquiry which engage our attention the moft, there are none, perhaps, that fo much excite continued curiofity, from childhood to age ; none that the learned and unlearned fo equally wifh to inveftigate, as the nature and hiftory of thofe parts of the world, which have not, to our knowledge, been hitherto explored. To this defire the Voyages of the late Captain Cook have fo far afforded gratification, that nothing worthy of refearch by Sea, the Poles themfelves excepted, remains to be examined; but by Land, the objects of Difcovery are ftill fo vaft, as to include at leaft a third of the habitable furface of the earth : for much of Afia, a ftill larger proportion of America, and almof the whole of Africa, are unvifited and unknown.

In Afia there are few extenfive diftricts of which we are wholly ignorant; but there are many of which we are imperfectly informed; and to our knowledge of feveral of thefe, the expected publication of the Travels of Mr. Forfter, in the fervice of the Eaft India Company, may bring material improvement. For, about three years fince, in returning from Hindoftan to Europe, he travelled by the way of Laldong, Jummoo, Cafhmire, Cabul, Herat, and the Cafpian Sea; and though the character of a Moorifh Merchant, a difguife which the nature of the journey compelled him to affume, would not permit him to depart fo far from the ufage of Afia, as to make a draught of the country, or to write any other than fhort memorandums as he paffed, yet, if we may judge from the opportunities he had of information, his Narrative muft be important. It will probably fhew the manners and cuftoms, and military ftrength of the populous tribes that inhabit the mountains on the North of Lahore: it promifes to gratify the eagernefs which all men exprefs to acquire a knowledge of the fequeftered and unexplored, though celebrated Country of Cafhmire : and there is reafon to fuppofe, that it will alfo defcribe the rifing Empire of the Seiks, the conquerors of Zabeta Cawn, and the rivals of Abdalla. Should this be the cafe, we fhall learn the hiftory of an Empire that already extends from the river Attok, the weftern branch of the Indus, to the banks of the Jumma; and poffibly too we may alfo be told the particulars of a Religion, which, according to the accounts received, profeffes to bring back the Hindoos from the idolatrous veneration of images to the purity of their primitive faith, the worhip of One God: a Religion, which is faid to afcribe to its Founder, Nanock, who died about 200 years fince, a facred character, by fuppofing that he was Brimha, and that this was his laft appearance upon earth : a Religion, which its Followers, in contradiction to the former uniform practice of the Believers in the Shafter, endeavour to make univerfal, and, with a zeal which refembles the Mahometan, conftantly enforce by the fword.

DSI  tends

To our knowledge of America, a large and valuable addition may foon be expected ; for feveral of the inhabitants of Canada had the fpirit, about two years fince, to fend, at their own expence, different perfons to traverfe that vaft continent, from the river St. Lawrence weftward to the oppofite ocean.

While, in this manner, the circle of our knowledge with refpect to Afia and America is gradually extending itfelf, and advancing toward's perfection, fome progrefs has been made in the the difcovery of particular parts of Africa: for Dr. Sparman's Narrative has furnifhed important information, to which will foon be added that of Mr. Patterfon, whofe account of his Travels and Obfervations in the Southern Parts of Africa is already in the Prefs; and if a defcription of the fill more extended Travels of Colonel Gordon, the prefent Commander of the Dutch Troops at the Cape of Good Hope, fhould be given to the Public, the fouthern extremity of the African peninfula may perhaps be juflly confidered as explored. Mr. Bruce alfo, it is faid, is preparing for the Prefs an account of the knowledge which he has obtained on the eaftern fide of that quarter of the globe,

But notwithftanding the progrefs of difcovery on the coafts and borders of that vaft continent, the map of its Interior is ftill but a wide extended blank, on which the Geographer, on the authority of Leo Africanus, and of the Xeriff Edriffi the Nubian Author, has traced, with a hefitating hand, a few names of unexplored rivers and of uncertain nations.

The courfe of the Niger, the places of its rife and termination, and even its exiftence as a feparate ftream, are ftill undetermined. Nor has our knowledge of the Senegal and

Gambia

Gambia rivers improved upon that of De la Brue and Moore; for though fince their time half a century has elapfed, the Falls of Felu on the firft of thefe two rivers, and thofe of Baraconda on the laft, are ftill the limits of difcovery.

Neither have we profited by the information which we have long poffeffed, that even on the weftern coafts of Africa, the Mahometan faith is received in many extenfive diftricts, from the Tropic of Cancer fouthward to the Line. That the Arabic, which the Muffulman Priefts of all countries underftand, furnifhes an eafy accefs to fuch knowledge as the weftern Africans are able to fupply, is perfectly obvious; as it alfo is, that thofe Africans muft, from the nature of their Religion, poffefs, what the Traders to the coaft afcribe to them, an intercourfe with Mecca. But although thefe circumftances apparently prove the practicability of exploring the Interior Parts of Africa, and would much facilitate the execution of the Plan, yet no fuch efforts have hitherto been made. Certain however it is, that, while we continue ignorant of fo large a portion of the globe, that ignorance muft be confidered as a degree of reproach upon the prefent age.

Senfible of this fligma, and defirous of refcuing the age from from a charge of ignorance, which, in other refpects, belongs fo little to its character, a few Individuals, ftrongly impreffed with a conviction of the practicability and utility of thus enlarging the fund of human knowledge, have formed the Plan of an Affociation for Promoting the Difcovery of the Interior Parts of Africa.

The nature of their Eftablifhment will beft appear from the following account of their proceedings.

At an Adjourned Meeting of the Saturday's Club, at the St. Alban's Tavern, on the 9th of 'June, 1788,

PRESENT,
EARL OF GALLOWAY,
LORD RAWDON,
GENERAL CONWAY,
SIR ADAM FERGUSSON,
SIR JOSEPH BANKS,
SIR WILLIAM FORDYCE,
MR. PULTNEY,
MR. BEAUFOY,
MR. STUART:
ABSENT,

ABSENT MEMBERS,  BISHOP OF LANDAFF, LORD CARYSFORT, SIR JOHN SINCLAIR:

RESOLVED,

That as no fpecies of information is more ardently defired, or more generally ufeful, than that which improves the fcience of Geography; and as the vait Continent of Africa, notwithftanding the efforts of the Ancients, and the wifhes of the Moderns, is ftill in a great meafure unexplored, the Members of this Club do form themfelves into an Affociation for Promoting the Difcovery of the Inland Parts of that Quarter of the World:

That, for the faid purpofe, each Member do fubfcribe Five Guineas a year, for three years; and that at, or after that period, any Member, on giving a year's notice, may withdraw himfelf from the Aflociation :

That during the firft twelve months from the prefent day, each of the Members of the Club be allowed to recommend, for the approbation of the Club, fuch of his Friends as he fhall think proper to be admitted to the new Affociation ; but that after that time all additional Members be elected by a Ballot of the Affociation at large:

That a Committee, confifting of a Secretary and Treafurer, and of three Affifting Members, be chofen by Ballot:

That the faid Committee do prepare and fubmit to the confideration of the Members, at their next meeting, fuch Rules as they fhall think requifite for the effectual attainment of the object of the new Inflitution, and for its good government:

That the Committee be entrufted with the choice of the perfons who are to be fent on the Difcovery of the Interior Parts of Africa, together with the Society's Correfpondence, and the Management of its Funds:

That the Committee fhail not difclofe, except to the Members of the Affociation at large, fuch intelligence as they fhall, from time to time, receive from the perfons who fhall be fent out on the bufinefs of Difcovery:

That on the receipt of any interefting intelligence from any of the faid perfons, the Members of the Affociation fhall be convened by Letters from the Secretary; and that fuch parts of the faid intelligence as, in the opinion of the Committee, may, without endangering the object of their Affociation, be made public, fhall be communicated to the Meeting:

That an Account of all Monies paid and received fhall, on the laft Saturday in the month of May in each year, be fubmitted to the confideration of the Society at large, by the Treafurer :

That the Members of the Committee be chofen by Ballot, on the firft Saturday in the month of May in each year.

The preceding Refolutions having been agreed to by all the Members prefent, they proceeded on the fame day, the 9 th of June, 1788 , in purfuance of their Fourth Refolution, to chufe a Committee by Ballot, and the following perfons were elected:

LORD RAWDON,BISHOP OF LANDAFF,SIR JOSEPH BANKS,MR. BEAUFOY,MR, STUART.

CHAPTER I.

Proceedings of the Afociation from the Time of its Efablijhment, to that of the Departure of Mr. Ledyard.

THE Affociation for Promoting the Difcovery of the Interior Regions of Africa was formed on the 9th of June, in the year ${ }^{1788}$; and on the fame day a Committee of its Members was invefted with the direction of its Funds, the management of its Correfpondence, and the choice of the perfons to whom the Geographical miffion fhould be affigned.

Naturally anxious for the fpeedy attainment of the important object thus recommended to their care, an object made doubly interefting by the confideration of its having engaged the attention, and baffled the refearches of the moft inquifitive and and the moft powerful nations of antiquity, the Managers proceeded with the utmoft ardour to the immediate execution of the Plan.
'Two Gentlemen, whofe qualifications appeared to be eminent, propofed to undertake the Adventure,

One of them, a Mr. Ledyard, was an American by birth, and feemed from his youth to have felt an invincible defire to make himfelf acquainted with the unknown, or imperfectly difcovered regions of the globe. For feveral years he had lived with the Indians of America, had ftudied their manners, and had practifed in their fchool the means of obtaining the protection, and of recommending himfelf to the favour of $\mathrm{Sa}-$ vages. In the humble fituation of a Corporal of Marines, to which he fubmitted rather than relinquifh his purfuit, he had made, with Captain Cook, the Voyage of the World; and feeling on his return an anxious defire of penetrating from the North Weftern Coaft of America, which Cook had partly explored, to the Eaftern Coaft, with which he himfelf was perfectly familiar, he determined to traverfe the vaft Continent from the Pacific to the Atlantic Ocean.

His firft Plan for the purpofe was that of embarking in a veffel which was then preparing to fail, on a Voyage of Commercial Adventure, to Nootka Sound, on the Weftern Coaft of America; and with this view he expended in fea ftores, the greateft part of the money which his chief benefactor Sir Jofeph Banks (whofe generous conduct the Writer of this Narrative has often heard him acknowledge) had liberally fupplied. But the fcheme being fruftrated by the rapacity of a Cuftom-houfe Officer, who had feized and detained the veffel for reafons which on legal inquiry proved to be frivolous, he determined to travel over land to Kamfchatka, from whence to the Weftern coaft of America the paffage is extremely fhort. With no more than ten guineas in his purfe, which was all that he had left, he croffed the Britifh Channel to Oftend, and by the way of Denmark and the Sound, proceeded to the capital of Sweden, from whence, as it was Winter, he attempted to traverfe the Gulph of Bothnia on the ice, in order to reach Kamfchatka by the fhorteft way ; but finding, when he came to the middle of the fea, that the water was not frozen, he returned to Stockholm, and taking his courfe Northward, walked into the Arctic Circle; and paffing round the head of the Gulph, defcended on its Eaftern fide to Peterßburgh.

There, he was foon noticed as an extraordinary man. Without ftockings, or fhoes, and in too much poverty to provide himfelf with either, he received and accepted an invitation to dine with the Portugueze Ambaffador. To this invitation it was probably owing that he was able to obtain the fum of twenty guineas for a bill on Sir Jofeph Banks, which he confeffed he had no authority to draw, but which, in confideration of the bufinefs that he had undertaken, and of the progrefs that he had made, Sir Jofeph, he believed, would not be unwilling to pay. To the Ambaffador's intereft it might alfo be owing that he obtained permiffion to accompany a detachment of Stores which the Emprefs had ordered to be fent to Yakutz, for the ufe of Mr. Billings, an Englihman, at that time in her fer* vice 。

Thus accommodated, he travelled Eaftward through Siberia, fix thoufand miles, to Yakutz, where he was kindly received by Mr. Billings, whom he remembered on board Captain Cook's fhip, inthe fituation of the Aftronomer's Servant, but to whom the Emprefs had now entrufted her fchemes of Northern difcovery,

From Yakutz he proceeded to Oczakow, on the coaft of the Kamfchatka fea, from whence he meant to have paffed over to that that peninfula, and to have embarked on the Eaftern fide in one of the Ruffian veffels that trade to the Weftern fhores of America; but finding that the navigation was completely obftrueted by the ice, he returned again to Yakutz, in order to wait for the conclufion of the Winter.

Such was his fituation, when, in confequence of fufpicions not hitherto explained, or refentments for which no reafon is affigned, he was feized, in the Emprefs's name, by two Ruffian foldiers, who placed him in a fledge, and conveying him, in the depth of Winter, through the Deferts of the Northern Tartary, left him at laft on the Frontiers of the Polifh Dominions. As they parted they told him, that if he returned to Ruffia, he would certainly be hanged, but that if he chofe to go back to England, they wifhed him a pleafant journey.

In the midft of poverty, covered with rags, infefted with the ufual accompaniments of fuch cloathing, worn with continued hardfhip, exhaufted by difeafe, without friends, without credit, unknown, and full of mifery, he found his way to Koningfberg. ---There, in the hour of his uttermoft diffrefs, he refolved once more to have recourfe to his old Benefactor, and he luckily found a perfon who was willing to take his draft for five guineas on the Prefident of the Royal Society.

With this affiftance he arrived in England, and immediately waited on Sir Jofeph Banks, who told him, knowing his temper, that he believed he could recommend him to an adventure almoft as perilous as the one from which he had returned; and then communicated to him the wifhes of the Affociation for Difcovering the Inland Countries of Africa.

Ledyard replied, that he had always determined to traverfe the Continent of Africa as foon as he had explored the Interior of North America; and as Sir Jofeph had offered him a Letter of Introduction, he came directly to the Writer of thefe Memoirs. Before I had learnt from the note the name and bufinefs of my Vifitor, I was ftruck with the manlinefs of his perfon, the breadth of his cheft, the opennefs of his countenance, and the inquietude of his eye. I fpread the map of Africa before him, and tracing a line from Cairo to Sennar, and from thence Weftward in the latitude and fuppofed direction of the Niger, I told him that was the route, by which I was anxious that Africa might, if poffible, be explored. He faid, he fhould think himfelf fingu-larly fortunate to be entrufted with the Adventure. I afked him when he would fet out? "To-morrow morning," was his anfwer. I told him I was afraid that we fhould not be able, in fo fhort a time, to prepare his inftructions, and to procure for him the letters that were requifite ; but that if the Committee fhould approve of his propofal, all expedition fhould be ufed.

Such is the hiftory, and fuch were the qualifications of one of the perfons whom the Committee engaged in its fervice.

The other, Mr. Lucas, had been fent, when a boy, to Cadiz, in Spain, for education as a merchant, and having the misfortune on his return to be captured by a Sallee Rover, was brought as a flave to the Imperial Court of Morocco.

Three years of captivity preceded his reftoration to freedom, and his confequent departure for Gibraltar ; where, at the requeft of General Cornwallis, he accepted the offices of Vice-Conful and Chargé d'Affaires in the Empire of Morocco ; and had the fatisfaction to return, as the Delegate of his Sovereign, to the very kingdom in which, for fo long a period, he had lived as a flave. At the end of fixteen years he once more revifited England, and was foon appointed Oriental Interpreter to the D 2 Britifh Britiih Court, in which fituation he was when he became known to the Committee, and expreffed his willingnefs, with His Majefty's permiffion, to undertake, in the Service of the Affociation, whatever Journey his knowlege of the Manners, Cuftoms, and Language of the Arabs might enable him to perform. His Majefty, with that liberal attention to the Progrefs of Knowledge which at all times has diftinguifhed his reign, fignified his pleafure, that Mr. Lucas fhould proceed on the bufinefs of the Society ; and that his falary as Oriental Interpreter fhould be continued to him during his abfence.

Having thus obtained the affiftance of two perfons fo eminently qualified to facilitate the attainment of its object, the Committee proceeded to prefcribe to them their refpective routs.

To Mr. Ledtard they affigned, at his own defire, as an enterprize of obvious peril and of difficult fuccefs, the tafk of traverfing from Eaft to Weft, in the latitude attributed to the Niger, the wideft part of the Continent of Africa.

To Mr. Lucas, in confideration of the knowledge which hepoffeffed of the Language and Manners of the Arabs, they allotted lotted the paffage of the Defert of Zahara, from Tripoli to Fezzan; for they had learned from various information, that with this kingdom, which in fome meafure is dependent on Tripoli, the traders of Agadez and Tombuctou, and of other towns in the Interior of Africa, had eftablifhed a frequent and regular intercourfe; and their inftructions to him were, that he fhould proceed directly to Fezzan ; that he fhould collect and tranfmit by the way of Tripoli, whatever intelligence, refpecting the Inland Regions of the Continent, the people of Fezzan, or the traders who vifited their country, might be able to afford; and that he fhould afterwards return by the way of the Gambia, or by that of the Coaft of Guinea.

One obftacle to the departure of thefe Geographical Miffionaries was ftill to be removed; and that was, the fmallnefs of the Fund; for the Members of the Affociation, which had not yet paffed the fecond month of its exiftence, were extremely few, and the Committee were too confcious of the importance and dignity of their undertaking, to canvafs for fubfcriptions.

In this dilemma, the Committee refolved to advance the money that was requifite; and they accordingly raifed among themfelves the fum of 4301 , which enabled them to provide for their travellers the means of immediate equipment, and the letters of neceffary credit.

Mr. Lucas, detained by illnefs, did not leave England till the 6th of Auguft.

CHAPTER II.

Mr. Ledyard's Arrival at Cairo.---His Remarks on the Issbabitants, ©®c.---His Death and Character.

MR. Ledyard took his departure from London on the 30th of June, 1788 ; and after a journey of fix and thirty days, feven of which were confumed at Paris, and two at Marfeilles, arrived in the city of Alexandria.

His Letters of Recommendation to the Britifh Conful fecured him from the embarraffments that the want of inns would otherwife wherwife have occafioned ; and procured for him the neceffary inftructions for affuming the drefs, and adopting the manners that are requifite for an Egyptian Traveller.

Forcibly impreffed by the objects which he faw, and natuarlly led to compare them with thofe which other Regions of the Globe had prefented to his view, he defcribes with the energy of an original Obferver, and exhibits in his Narrative the varied effect of fimilarity and contraft: but as the travellers who preceded him, have obtained and tranfmitted to Europe whatever knowledge, either ancient or modern, the Lower Egypt affords, and as the examination of that country was no part of the bufinefs which was given him in charge, his defcriptions, generally fpeaking, would add but little to the inftruction which other Narratives convey.

The following Extracts from different parts of his Journal are given in his own words.
" A traveller, who fhould, by juft comparifons between things here and in Europe, tell his tale ; who, by a mind unbewitched by antecedent defcriptions, too ftrong, too bold, too determined, too honeft, to be capable of lying, fhould fpeak juft as he thought, would, no doubt, be efteemed an arrant fool, and a ftupid coxcomb.---For example, an Englifhman who had never feen Egypt, would afk me what fort of a woman an Egyptian woman was? If I meant to do the queftion as much juftice by the anfwer, as I could in my way, I hould afk him to take notice of the firft company of Gypfies he faw behind a hedge in Effex; and I fuppofe he would be fool enough to think me a fool.
" Auguft 14 th. I left Alexandria at midnight, with a pleafant breeze North; and was, at fun-rife next morning, at the mouth of the Nile, which has a bar of fand acrofs it, and foundings as irregular as the fea, which is raifed upon it by the contentions of counter currents and winds.
"The view in failing up the Nile is very confined, unlefs from the top of the maft, or fome other eminence, and then it is an unbounded plain of excellent land, miferably cultivated, and yet interfperfed with a great number of villages, both on its banks and as far along the meadows as one can fee in any direction: the river is alfo filled with boats paffing and repaffing---boats all of one kind, and navigated in one manner; nearly alfo of one fize, the largeft carrying ten or fifteen tons. On board of thefe E boats boats are feen onions, water-melons, dates, fometimes a horfe, a camel, (which lies down in the boat) and fheep and goats, dogs, men and women.---Towards evening and morning they have mufic.
" Whenever we ftopped at a village, I ufed to walk into it with my Conductor, who, being a Muffelman, and a defcendant from Mahommed, wore a green turban, and was therefore refpected, and I was fure of fafety:---but in truth, dreffed as I was in a common Turkifh habit, I believe I fhould have walked as fafely without him. I faw no propenfity among the inhabitants to incivility. The villages are moft miferable affemblages of poor little mud huts, flung very clofe together without any kind of order, full of duft, lice, fleas, bed-bugs, flies, and all the curfes of Mofes : people poorly clad, the youths naked; in fuch refpects, they rank infinitely below any Savages I ever faw.
" The common people wear nothing but a fhirt and drawers, and they are always blue. Green is the royal or holy colour; none but the defcendants of Mahommed, if I am rightly informed, being permitted to wear it.
"Auguft 19 th. From the little town where we landed, the diftance diftance to Cairo is about a mile and a half, which we rode on affes; for the afs in this country is the Chriftian's horfe, as he is allowed no other animal to ride upon. Indeed I find the fituation of a Chriftian, or what they more commonly call here a Frank, to be very, very humiliating, ignominious, and diftreffing: no one, by a combination of any caufes, can reafon down to fuch effects as experience teaches us do exift here: it being impofible to conceive, that the enmity I have alluded to could exift between men ;---or, in fact, that the fame fpecies of beings, from any caufes whatever, fhould ever think and act fo differently as the Egyptians and the Englifh do.
" I arrived at Cairo early in the morning, on the 19 th of Auguft, and went to the houfe of the Venetian Conful, Mr. Rofetti, Chargé d'Affaires for the Englifh Conful here.
" After dinner, not being able to find any other lodging, and receiving no very preffing invitation from Mr. Rofetti, to lodge with him, I went to a convent. This convent confifts of Miffionaries fent by the Pope to propagate the Chriftian Faith, or at leaft to give fhelter to Chriftians. The Chriftians here are principally from Damafcus: the convent is governed by the Order of Recollets: a number of Englifh, as well as other Eu* ropean travellers, have lodged there.

"Auguft 2 rft . It is now about the hotteft feafon of the year here ; but I think I have felt it warmer in the City of Philadelphia, in the fame month.
"Auguft 26th. This day I was introduced by Rofetti to the Aga Mahommed, the confidential Minifter of Ifmael, the moft powerful of the four ruling Beys: he gave me his hand to kifs, and with it the promife of letters, protection, and fupport, through Turkifh Nubia, and alfo to fome Chiefs far inland. In a fubfequent converfation, he told me I fhould fee in my travels a people who had power to tranfmutate themfelves into the forms of different animals. He afked me what $I$ thought of the affair? I did not like to render the ignorance, fimplicity, and credulity of the Turk apparent. I told him, that it formed a part of the character of all Savages to be great Necromancers; but that I had never before heard of any fo great as thofe which he had done me the honour to defcribe; that it had rendered me more anxious to be on my voyage, and if I paffed among them, I would, in the letter I promifed to write to him, give him a more particular account of them than he had hitherto had.---He afked me how I could travel without the language of the people where I fhould pafs? I told him, with vocabularies :---I might as well have read to him a page of Newton's Principia. He returned to his fables again. Is it not curious, that the Egyptians (for I fpeak of the natives of the country as well as of him, when I make the obfervation) are ftill fuch dupes to the arts of forcery? Was it the fame people who built the Pyramids ?
" I can't underftand that the Turks have a better opinion of our mental powers than we have of theirs; but they fay of us, that we are " a people zobo carry our minds on our fingers ends:" meaning, that we put them in exercife conftantly, and render them fubfervient to all manner of purpofes, and with celerity, difpatch, and eafe, do what we do.
" I furpect the Copts to have been the origin of the Negro race : the nofe and lips correfpond with thofe of the Negro. The hair, whenever I can fee it among the people here, (the Copts) is curled ;---not clofe like the Negros, but like the Mulattoes. I obferve a greater variety of colour among the human fpecies here than in any other country; and a greater variety of feature than in any other country not poffeffing a greater degree of civilization.
" I have
" I have feen an Abyffinian woman and a Bengal man---the colour is the fame in both; fo are their features and perfons
" I have feen a fimall mummy ;---it has what I call wampum work on it. It appears as common here as among the Tartars. Tatowing is as prevalent among the Arabs of this place as among the South Sea Iflanders. It is a little curious, that the women here are more generally than in any other part of the world tatowed on the chin, with perpendicular lines defcending from the under lip to the chin, like the women on the North Weft Coaft of America. It is alfo a cuftom here to ftain the nails red, like the Cochin Chinefe, and the Northern Tartars. The mafk or veil that the women here wear, refembles exactly that worn by the Priefts at Otaheite, and thofe feen at Sandwich Iflands.
6. I have not yet feen the Arabs make ufe of a tool like our axe or hatchet; but what they ufe for fuch purpofes as we do our hatchet and axe, is in the form of an adze, and is a form we found moft agreeable to the South Sea Iflanders. I fee no inftance of a tool formed defignedly for the ufe of the right or left hand particularly, as the cotogon is among the Yorkertic Tartars,
" There is certainly a very remarkable affinity between the Ruffian

Ruffian and Greek drefs. The fillet round the temples of the Greek and Ruffian women, is a circumftance in drefs that perhaps would ftrike nobody as it does me; and fo of the wampum work too, which is alfo found among them both.
" They fpin here with the diftaff and fpindle only, like the French peafantry and others in Europe ; and the common Arab loom is upon our principle, though rude.
" I faw to-day (Auguft roth) an Arab woman white, like the White Indians in the South Sea Iflands, Ifthmus of Darien, &c. Thefe kind of people all look alike.
" Among the Greek women here, I find the identical Archangel head-drefs.
" Their mufic is inftrumental, confifting of a drum and pipe, both which refemble thofe two inftruments in the South Seas: the drum is exactly like the Otaheite drum ; the pipe is made of cane, and confifts of a long and flort tube joined: the mufic refembles very much the bagpipe, and is pleafant.------All their mufic is concluded, if not accompanied, by the clapping of hands. I think it fingular, that the women here make a noife with their mouths like frogs, and that this frog-mufic is always made at weddings ; and I believe on all other occafions of merriment where there are women.
"It is remarkable, that the dogs here are of juft the fame fpecies found among the Otaheiteans.
"It is alfo remarkable, that in one village I faw exactly the fame machines ufed for diverfion as in Ruffia.---I forget the Ruffian name for it. It is a large kind of wheel, on the extremities of which there are fufpended feats, in which people are whirled round over and under each other.
"The women drefs their hair behind exactly in the fame manner in which the women of the Calmuc Tartars drefs theirs.
" In the Hiftory of the Kingdom of Benin in Guinea, the Chiefs are called Aree Roee, or Street Kings. Among the Iflands in the South Sea, Otaheite, &c. they call the Chiefs Arees, and the great Chiefs Aree le Hoi. I think this curious; and fo I do that it is a cuftom of the Arabs to fpread a blanket when they would invite any one to eat or reft with them.---American Indians fpread the beaver fkins on fuch occafions.
" The Arabs of the Deferts, like the Tartars, have an invincible attachment to Liberty : no arts will reconcile them to an! other life, or form of government, however modified. This is a character given me here of the Arabs.
" It is fingular that the Arab Language has no word for Liberty, although it has for Slaves.
" The Arabs, like the New Zealanders, engage with a long ftrong feear.
" I have made the beft inquiries I have been able, fince I have been here, of the nature of the country before me; of Sennar, Darfoor, Wangara, of Nubia, Abyffinia, of thofe named, or unknown by name. I fhould have been happy to have fent you better information of thofe places than I am yet able to do. It will appear very fingular to you in England, that we in Egypt are fo ignorant of countries which we annually vifit: the Egyptians know as little of Geography as the generality of the French; and like them, fing, dance, and traffic without it.
" I have the beft affurances of a certain and fafe conduct by the return of the caravan that is arrived from Sennar ; and Mr.

Rofetti tells me that the letters I fhall have from the Aga here, will infure me of being conveyed, from hand to hand, to my journey's end.,
" The Mahometans in Africa are what the Ruffians are in Siberia, a trading, enterprizing, fuperflitious, warlike fet of vagabonds, and wherever they are fet upon going, they will and do go; but they neither can nor do make voyages merely commercial, or merely religious, acrofs Africa; and where we do not find them in commerce, we find them not at all. They cannot (however rehemently pufhed on by religion) afford to crofs the Continent without trading by the way.
" October I4th. I went to-day to the market-place, where they vend the Black flaves that come from towards the interior parts of Africa :---there were 200 of them together, dreffed and ornamented as in their country. The appearance of a Savage in every region is almoft the fame!-----There were very few men among them: this indicates that they are prifoners of war. They have a great many beads and other ornaments about them that are from the Eaft. I was told by one of them that they came from the Weft of Sennar, fifty-five days journey, which may be about four or five hundred miles. A Negro Chief faid, the Nile had had its fource in his country. In general they had their hair plaited in a great number of fmall detached plaits, none exceeding in length fix or eight inches---the hair was filled with greafe, and dirt purpofely daubed on.
" October 1 6th. I have renewed my vifit to-day, and paffed it more agreeably than yefterday; for yefterday I was rudely treated. The Franks are prohibited to purchafe flaves, and therefore the Turks do not like to fee them in the market. Mr. Rofetti favoured me with one of his running Chargé d'Affaires to accompany me: but having obferved yefterday among the ornaments of the Negros a variety of beads, and wanting to know from what country they came, I requefted Mr. Rofetti, previoufly to my fecond vifit, to fhew me from his fore famples of Venetian beads. ---- -He fhewed me famples of fifteen hundred different kinds: after this I fet out.
" The name of the country thefe Savages come from is Darfoor, and is well known on account of the Slave Trade, as well as of that in Gum and Elephants teeth.
" The appearance of thefe Negros declares them to be a people in as favage a ftate as any people can; but not of fo fa-vage a temper, or of that fpecies of countenance that indicates favage intelligence. They appear a harmlefs, wild people; but they are moftly young women.

$$
\text { F } 2 \quad \text { rage }
$$

" The beads they are ornamented with are Venetian; and they have fome Venetian brafs medals which the Venetians make for trade. The beads are worked wampum-wife. I know not where they got the marine fhells they worked among their beads, nor how they could have feen white men. I afked them if they would ufe me well in their country, if I fhould vifit it? They faid, "Yes:"---and added, that they fhould make a King of me, and treat me with all the delicacies of their country. Like the Egyptian women, and like moft other Savages, they ftick on ornaments wherever they can, and wear, like them, a great ring in the nofe, either from the cartilage, or from the fide: they alfo rub on fome black kind of paint round the eyes, like the Egyptian women. They are a fizeable well-formed people, quite black, with what, I believe, we call the true Guinea face, and with curled fhort hair; butnot more curled or fhorter than I have feenit among the Egyptians; but in general thefe Savages plait it in taffels plaiftered with clay or paint. Among fome of them the hair is a foot long, and curled, refembling exactly one of our mops. The prevailing colour, where it can be feen, is a black and red mixed.
mixed. I think it would make any hair curl, even Uncle Toby's wig, to be plaited and plaiftered as this is. This caravan, which I call the Darfoor caravan, is not very rich..--The Sennar is the rich caravan.
" October I 9th. I went yefterday to fee if more of the Darfoor caravan had arrived ; but they were not. I wonder why travellers to Cairo have not vifited thefe flave markets, and converfed with the Jelabs or travelling Merchants of thefe caravans: both are certainly fources of great information.-----The eighth part of the money expended on other accounts, might here anfwer fome good folid purpofe. For my part, I have not expended a crown, and I have a better idea of the people of Africa, of its trade, of the pofition of places, the nature of the country, manner of travelling, &c. than ever I had by any other means; and, I believe, better than any other means would afford me.
" October 25 th. I have been again to the flave market; but neither the Jelabs (a name which in this country is given to all travelling Merchants) nor the flaves are yet arrived in town--they will be here to-morrow. I met two or three in the ftreet, and one with a hield and fpear.

6" I have underftood to-day, that the King of Sennar is himfelf a Merchant, and concerned in the Sennar caravans. The Merchant here who contracts to convey me to Sennar, is Procurer at Cairo to the King of Sennar : this is a good circumftance, and one I knew not of till to-day. Mr. Rofetti informed me of it. He informed me alfo, that this year the importation of Negro Slaves into Egypt will amount to 20,000.------The caravans from the interior countries of Africa do not arrive here uniformly every year------they are fometimes abfent two or three years.
"Among a dozen of Sennar flaves, I faw three perfonable men, of a good bright olive colour, of vivacious and intelligent countenances; but they had all three (which firft attracted my notice, heads uncommonly formed: the forehead was the narroweft, the longeft, and moft protuberant I ever faw. Many of thefe flaves fpeak a few words of the Arab language ; but whether they learned them before or fince their captivity I cannot tell.
"A caravan goes from here (Cairo) to Fezzan, which they call a journey of fifty days; and from Fezzan to Tombuctou, which they call a journey of ninety days. The caravans travel about twenty miles a day, which makes the diftance on the road from here to Fezzan, one thoufand miles; and from Fezzan to Tombuctou, one thoufand eight hundred miles. From here to Sennar is reckoned fix hundred miles.
" I have been waiting feveral days to have an interview with the Jelabs who go from hence to Sennar. I am told that they carry, in general, trinkets; but among other things, foap, antimony, red linen, razors, fciffars, mirrors, beads; and, as far as I can jet learn, they bring from Sennar elephants teeth, the gum called here gum Sennar, camels, oftrich feathers, and flaves.
" Wangara is talked of here as a place producing much gold, and as a kingdom: all accounts, and there are many, agree in this. The King of Wangara (whom I hope to fee in about three months after leaving this) is faid to difpofe of juft what quantity he pleafes of his gold---fometimes a great deal, and fometimes little or none ; and this, it is faid, he does to prevent ftrangers knowing how rich he is, and that he may live in peace."

Such are the moft material of thofe remarks on the people of Africa, which Mr. Ledyard was enabled, by his refidence at Cairo, to fend to the Committee.------The views which they opened opened were interefting and infructive; but they derived their principal importance from the proofs which they afforded of the ardent fipirit of inquiry, the unwearied attention, the perfevering refearch, and the laborious, indefatigable, anxious zeal with which their Author purfued the object of his Miffion.

Already informed that his next difpatch would be dated from Sennar; that letters of earneft recommendation had been given him by the Aga; that the terms of his paffage had been fettled; and that the day of his departure was appointed---the Committee expected with impatience the defcription of his journey. Great was therefore their concern, and fevere their difappointment, when letters from Egypt announced to them the melancholy tidings of his death. A bilious complaint, the confequence of vexatious delays in the promifed departure of the caravan, had induced him to try the effect of too powerful a dofe of the acid of vitriol; and the fudden uneafinefs and burning pain which followed the incautious draught, impelled him to feek relief from the violent action of the ftrongeft Tartar emetic. A continued difcharge of blood difcovered the danger of his fituation, and fummoned to his aid the generous friendihip of the Venetian Conful, and the ineffectual fkill of the moft approved phyficians of Cairo

He was decently interred in the neighbourhood of fuch of the Englifh as had ended their days in the capital of Egypt.

The bilious complaint with which he was feized has been attributed to the frowardnefs of a childifh impatience---Much more natural is the conjecture, that his unexpected detention, week after week, and month after month, at Cairo, (a detention which confumed his finances, which therefore expofed to additional hazard the fuccefs of his favourite enterprize, and which confequently tended to bring into queftion his honour to the Society) had troubled his fpirits, had preyed upon his peace, and fubjected him at laft to the difeafe that proved in its confequences the means of dragging him to his grave.

Of his attachment to the Society, and of his zeal for their fervice, the following Extracts from his Letters are remarkably expreffive:
" Money! it is a vile flave!---I have at prefent an oconomy of a more exalted kind to obferve. I have the eyes of fome of the firft men of the firft kingdom on earth turned upon me. I am engaged by thofe very men, in the moft important object that any private individual can be engaged in: I have their approbation to acquire, or to lofe; and their efteem alfo, which I prize beyond every thing, except the independent idea of ferving mankind. Should rafhnefs or defperation carry me through, whatever fame the vain and injudicious might beftow, I fhould not accept of it;---it is the good and great I look to: fame from them beftowed is altogether different, and is clofely allied to a welldone from God: but rafhnefs will not be likely to carry methrough any more than timid caution. To find the neceffary medium of conduct, to vary and apply it to contingencies, is the occonomy I allude to; and if I fucceed by fuch means, men of fenfe in any fucceeding epoch will not blufh to follow me, and perfect thofe Difcoveries I have only abilities to trace out roughly, or, a difpofition to attempt.
" A Turkifh fopha has no charms for me: if it had, I could foon obtain one here. I could to-morrow take the command of the beft armament of Ifhmael Bey.--I fhould be fure of fuccefs, and its confequential honours. Believe me, a fingle welldone from your Affociation has more worth in it to me, than all the trappings of the Eaft; and what is ftill more precious, is, the pleafure I have in the juftification of my own conduct at the tribunal of my own heart."

To thofe who have never feen Mr. Ledyard, it may not, perhaps, be uninterefting to know, that his perfon, though fcarcely exceeding the middle fize, was remarkably expreffive of activity and ftrength; and that his manners, though unpolifhed, were neither uncivil nor unpleafing. Little attentive to difference of rank, he feemed to confider all men as his equals, and as fuch he refpected them. His genius, though uncultivated and irregular, was original and comprehenfive. Ardent in his wifhes, yet calm in his deliberations ; daring in his purpofes, but guarded in his meafures; impatient of controul, yet capable of ftrong endurance ; adventurous beyond the conception of ordinary men, yet wary and confiderate, and attentive to all precautions, he appeared to be formed by Nature for atchievements of hardihood and peril.

They who compare the extent of his pilgrimage through the waft regions of Tartary with the fcantinefs of his funds, will naturally afk, by what means he obtained a fubfiftence on the road ? All that I have ever learned from him on the fubject, was, that his fufferings were exceffive, and that more than once he owed his life to the compaffionate temper of the women. This laft remark is ftrongly confirmed by the following Extract from his account of his Siberian Tour:
G 2
" I have
" I have always remarked, that women, in all countries, are civil, obliging, tender, and humane ; that they are ever inclined to be gay and chearful, timorous and modeft; and that they do not hefitate, like men, to perform a generous action.---Not haughty, not arrogant, not fupercilious, they are full of courtefy, and fond of fociety : more liable, in general, to err than man; but in general, alfo, more virtuous, and performing more good actions than he. To a woman, whether civilized or favage, $\mathbf{I}$ never addreffed myfelf in the language of decency and friendfhip, without receiving a decent and friendly anfwer. With man it has often been otherwife.
"In wandering over the barren plains of inbofpitable Denmark, through boneft Sweden, and frozen Lapland, rude and cburlifh Finland, unprincipled Ruffa, and the wide fpread regions of the wandering Tartar, if hungry, dry, cold, wet, or fick, the women have ever been friendly to me, and uniformly fo ; and to add to this virtue, (fo worthy the appellation of benevolence) thefe actions have been performed in fo free, and fo kind a manner, that if I was dry, I drank the fweeteft draught, and if hungry, I eat the coarfe morfel with a double relifh."

But though the native benevolence, which even among Savages diftinguifhes and adorns the female character, might fometimes foften the feverity of his fufferings, yet at others he feems to have endured the utmoft preffure of diftrefs.
" I am accuftomed---(faid he, in our laft converfation---'twas on the morning of his departure for Africa)---I am accuftomed to hardfhips. I have known both hunger and nakednefs to the utmoft extremity of human fuffering. I have known what it is to have food given me as charity to a madman; and I have at times been obliged to fhelter myfelf under the miferies of that character to avoid a heavier calamity. My diftreffes have been greater than I have ever owned, or ever zvill own to any man. Such evils are terrible to bear; but they never yet had power to turn me from my purpofe. If I live, I will faithfully perform, in its utmoft extent, my engagement to the Society; and if I perifh in the attempt, my bonour will fill be fafe, for death cancels all bonds."

CHAPTER III.

> Arrival of Mr. Lucas at Trinoli.--His Reception by the Bafhare。 ---His Fourney to Mefurata with the Shereefs Fourwad and Im-bammed.---His Mode of obtaining from the latter an Account of his Travels in the Interior Countries of Africa.---His Returis to England.

Mr. LuCAS, having taken his paffage at Marfeilles, on board the St. Jean Baptifte, a fmall veffel belonging to that port, embarked on the 18 th of October, 1788 ; and on the 25 th of the fame month arrived in the harbour of Tripoli.

The date trees, which fpread themfelves like a foreft behind the town, and the hills beyond them, which bound the profpect on the South, are interefting objects; but the town itfelf is built in too low a fituation to compofe a part of the general fcene: for it is fcarcely vifible at the diftance of a mile.

The firft appearance of Tripoli may difappoint, by its meannefs, the expectations of the traveller; but if he reflects on the nature of a defpotic government, ever incompatible with permanent profperity, he will not be furprized when he finds, on a nearer view, that the city, though the capital of an empire, exhibits through all its extent, the marks of a rapid decay; that its fcanty limits, though fcarcely four miles in circumference, are too great for its prefent population; and that its antient caftle, though once the pride, and ftill the refidence, of the reigning family, is now a mouldering ruin.

The expected ceremonial of announcing to the Bafhaw, which is the title of the Sovereign, and to the Conful of the State, to whom the veffel belongs, her arrival in the harbour, having been regularly obferved, Mr. Lucas, accompanied by Mr. Tully, the Britifh Refident, waited on Hadgee Abdrahaman, the Tripoline Minifter for Foreign Affairs, who had formerly refided in England as Ambaffador from the Bafhaw ; and having known Mr. Lucas there, received him now with the joy of an old acquaintance, and the cordiality of an intimate friend. Encouraged by this kindnefs, Mr. Lucas explained to him the object of his miffion, and requefted that he would prefent and recommend him to the Bafhaw, and to the Prince, his eldeft fon, who is diftinguifhed by the title of the Bey. The Minitter confented; and the next morning was, accordingly, appointed by the Bafhaw for the firt of thefe audiences: the morning after was fixed on by the Bey for the latter.

The Bafhaw, a fhort and robuft old man, of a fair complexion, a pleafing countenance, and an affable, joyous difpofition, received Mr. Lucas with great complacency, and accepted, with much fatisfaction, his prefent of a pair of double-barrelled piftols, mounted with filver; but expreffed his furprize, when leave was afked to vifit his kingdom of Fezzan: for the journey, he faid, had never been attempted by a Chriftian. Mr. Lucas replied, that he was led to undertake it by the report which he had heard of various Roman antiquities in different parts of the kingdom, and by the hope of collecting a variety of medicinal plants that are not to be found in Europe. The Bafhaw appeared to be fatisfied, and promifed that, on the firft opportunity of a fafe conveyance, he would give him fuch aids for the journey as his countenance and protection could afford.

On the next morning Mr. Lucas was prefented to the Bey, the Bafhaw's eldeft fon, a tall and well fhaped, but dark complexioned man, in the middle period of life; and was received by him with the engaging politenefs for which he is eminently diftinguifhed. The prefent that was made to him, except that its. value was inferior, was fimilar to that which had been given tohis father; and the affurances of the protection and friendfhip, which he offered in return, were the fame in effect with thofe which the Bafhaw had expreffed.

Soon after his prefentation at Court, Mr. Lucas was informed that fome of the principal Tribes of the tributary Arabs had lately revolted from the Government, and were then in actual rebellion; that all the frontiers of Tripoli, on the fide of the Defert, were infefted by their inroads; that a caravan from the inland country had lately been attacked, and that a Spanifh Merchant had been plundered within a few miles of the Capital. Mr. Lucas was alfo informed, that the Bafhaw, who has no regular forces, was preparing to raife, on this occafion, an army of $2,000 \mathrm{men}$; that as foon as the grafs fhould be high enough to afford the neceffary forage for the cattle, which it would be in the month of December, they would begin their march to the frontier, where they would be joined by the troops of fuch of the Arabs as continued faithful to the Government.

With this army, the collective numbers of which were ex pected to amount to five or fix thoufand men, it was hoped that the Bey, by the ufual enforcements of predatory war, would be able to reduce the rebellious Tribes to their antient obedience, and to the payment of the cuftomary tribute.

But while, from this expectation, Mr. Lucas waited with impatience for the departure of the army, he was informed that two Shereefs from Fezzan, who were both, as their title announces, defcended from the Prophet, and one of whom had married the daughter of the King, were arrived in Tripoli. They came there as Merchants, and brought with them, for fale, a variety of articles, of which flaves and fenna were the chief; and as the reverence in which the defcendants of Mahomet are held fecures their perfons from violence, and their property from plunder, they did not think that the reftoration of peace was requifite for the fafety of their return. It was, therefore, with much fatisfaction that the Minifter, whofe intimate acquaintance they were, received from them an affurance, that if Mr. Lucas could bear the fatigue of the journey, they would take him under their protection, and would be anfwerable for his fafe arrival in Fezzan.

The next morning, in confequence of this converfation, the Shereefs waited upon Mr. Lucas. One of them, whofe rank as fon-in-law to the King, entitled him to the firft confideration, was a tall, thin, copper complexioned man, of too flender a frame for his height, which was nearly fix feet, but of an appearance that was expreffive of dignity: to this appearance the fedatenefs of his manners, and the fewnefs, but folidity of his words were particularly fuited. His age was feemingly about thirty-five years, and his name was Mohammed Benfein Haffen Fouwad. The other Shereef was a lively old man, fhort and thin, and dark coloured, almoft to blacknefs; affable, free, and entertaining in his converfation, and much refpected by his companion, to whom he was related. His name was Imhammed, and his age about fifty years.

After many compliments, for which their countrymen are famous, they expreffed to Mr . Lucas the pleafure they fhould feel in prefenting him to their King, who had never feen a Chriftian Traveller, and would be highly gratified by fo new a vifit. They affured him of every accommodation which their country could afford, and of every proof which they themfelves could give of the kindeft good will, and of the fincereft friendfhip. The conference was concluded by a prefent from Mr. Lucas of a pair of piftols to each, with a fuitable quantity of powder and ball, and flints.

The Bafhaw, being informed by the Minifter of the propofal and promifes of the Shereefs, expreffed his approbation of the fcheme, and fent, from his own ftables, as a prefent to Mr. Lucas, a handfome mule for the journey. The Bey, too, was no fooner acquainted with the arrangements, than he gave directions to a Jew taylor, who had been employed in making, and had juft finifhed his own tent, to wait upon Mr. Lucas, and take his orders for fuch a tent as would be requifite for his journey.

But while in this manner Mr. Lucas was preparing for his departure, and had befpoke a Turkifh drefs for himfelf, and a magnificent robe, as a prefent, for the King of Fezzan, an apprehenfion arofe in the mind of the Bafhaw, that if Mr. Lucas fhould be taken prifoner by theRebels, he himfelf fhould be reduced to the diftreffing dilemma of either concluding a difadvantageous peace, or of abandoning the Interpreter of the King of Great Britain to all the infults, and to all the cruelties which thofe Barbarians might be difpofed to inflict.

For this reafon, the force of which will be much more apparent, if the refpect in which the office of Interpreter in a Mahometan Government is ufually held, be confidered, he expreffed his defire (and in this defire his eldeft fon, the Bey, entirely concurredj that Mr. Lucas would defer his intended journey till the revolted Arabs fhould be reduced to obedience, and the peace of the Defert be reftored. A few days after this requifition, the Bey began his march with an army of 300 horfe and 1500 foot.

The Shereefs were no fooner informed of the obftacle which had arifen to the journey of their intended fellow-traveller, than they expreffed as much chagrin and difappointment as Mr . Lucas himfelf could feel; for they faid, that they had already fent word to their Sovereign, that they fhould foon have the pleafure to prefent to him a Chriftian, who had travelled from his native land, (a journey of many moons) with no other view than to gratify his wifh to vifit him, and to fee his kingdom of Fezzan:---that his anger would fall heavily on them, to whom he would attribute the difappointment; and would probably lead him to inflict on them the greateft indignity that Shereefs can endure, that of having duft heaped upon their heads.

Impreffed with thefe apprehenfions, the Shereefs waited upon the Bafhaw, and offered to be refponfible with their lives for the fafety of the Chriftian.

In this unfavourable ftate of Mr. Lucas's profpects, an old man of the clafs of Maraboots (a name which is given to perfons of diftinguifhed fanctity) informed the Minifter, with whom he had been long acquainted, that he meant, in a few days, to take his departure for Fezzan ; and that as the Rebels, in confequence of the march of the Bafhaw's forces, had removed from that part of the country through which he intended to pafs, he would engage that, under his conduct, Mr. Lucas fhould travel in fafety.

With this propofal Mr. Lucas, by the advice of the Minifter, and with the confent of the Bafhaw, had determined to comply, though againft his own opinion, for the countenance and behaviour of the Maraboot had fuggefted fufpicions of his fincerity; but while he was preparing for his departure, which was fixed for the Monday following, the Bafhaw, on further reflection, tion, concluded that the plan which the Shereefs had propofed would, on the whole, be attended with the fimalleft hazard.

The fcheme of the journey being thus finally fettled, the Bafhaw, at the requeft of the Minifter, prefented Mr. Lucas with a letter of recommendation to the King of Fezzan, of which the following is a tranflation.

> TRANSLATION OF THE BASHAW OF TRIPOLI's RECOMMENDATION OF M. LUCAS TO THE KING OF FEZZAN.
" Praife be unto the Almighty God, and unto our Lord his Prophet Mahommed, whofe protection and mercy we crave, and refign ourfelves to his holy will : to our Son Sydy Hamed Benmohamed, the great and juft ruler over his beloved people; may his days be long and happy. Amen.
" Peace, and the protection and bleffing of God, be with you, and preferve you from evil.
" We have to acquaint you, our fon, that our friend, the Englifh King, hath fent one of his Interpreters unto us, and defired defired we would procure him a fafe conveyance to Fezzan, where he goes for his own amufement and pleafure ; and as we have found a perfon whom we efteem, and who has promifed us to take great care of him, we have confented to let the faid Interpreter and his friends" go with him to Fezzan. We have to defire that you will fhew him and his friends every kindnefs in your power, and comply with all his wifhes; and fhould he be inclined to go to any other place, you will fend proper people to conduct him, and to protect him in every thing; for he is a man of fenfe, and much efteemed by us; wherefore we recommend him to your care and protection. Peace and the bleffing of God be with you: from the Slave of God, Ally Benkaramaly, whofe greatnefs is under the protectionof God. Dated in the Moon of Rabeah thénee 1203" --(which correfponds with the month of January, 1789 .)

$$
1
$$

To this rout by Mefurata, though not fo direct as the antient paffage by the way of the Mountains of Guariano, the Merchants who trade to Fezzan have lately given the preference: for in the firft place, they avoid the oppreffive contributions, which, even I in

* In the Arabic, the word Friend is often employed, as in this palfage, to exprefs the fame meaning as the Englifo term fervant.
in time of peace, the rapacious tribes of Hooled Benfoliman and Benioleed, who inhabit thofe hills, have often levied on travellers; and in the next place, they have not only the advantage of fending their heavy merchandize to Mefurata by fea, but have alfo an opportunity of hiring there, at a much lower rate than at Tripoli, the camels for which they have occafion.

On Sunday the firft of February, 1789 , at half an hour after eight in the morning, the Shereefs, accompanied by Mr. Lucas, took their departure from the fuburbs of Tripoli, where, in a garden which is fituated at the diftance of three miles from the town, and which belonged to a Tripoline Merchant, who was travelling with them to Fezzan, they and their attendants had flept the evening before.

The caravan was compofed of the Shereef Fouwad, and of three other Merchants, on horfeback, all of them well armed; of the little old Shereef, who rode upon an afs; of Mr. Lucas, who was mounted on the mule which the Bafhaw had given him; of Mr. Lucas's black fervant, well armed, upon a camel; of twelve Fezzaners on foot, but armed; of three Negros and their wives, who had been flaves at Tripoli, but having obtained their freedom, were now travelling to Fezzan on their return to their their native country; and of twenty-one camels, with fifteen drivers, each of whom was armed with a mufket and a piftol.

That fo few camels were requifite in this part of the journey, was owing to the expedient which the Shereefs, with great oconomy, had adopted, of fending their heavy merchandize by fea to Mefurata.

At twelve o'clock, the caravan, whofe courfe was E. S. E. paffed through the town of Tajarah, a miferable collection of claywalled huts, of which fome were covered with terrace, and the reft with roofs of thatch: but wretched as the buildings are, the country around them abounds with date trees, among which a few of the olive are intermixed.

At five the caravan encamped for the night upon a fandy eminence. No fooner were the camels unburthened of their loads, than their drivers turned them loofe to feed on the ftubble of the valleys, and on the brambles of the adjacent hills; but though their freedom is thus given them, they never ftray to a greater diftance than that of two or three hundred paces from the camp.

The loads in the mean time are piled in a circle, and, except at the narrow opening which forms the entrance, are flowed as clofe as poffible to each other. Within this circle the Merchants and drivers and fervants fpread their mats and carpets. Here, alfo, they light their fires and drefs their victuals; and without any other covering than their alhaiques or blankets (for very few are furnifhed with a tent) lie down amidft the heavy dews and occafional ftorms of rain that fall upon the coaft, and fleep as foundly as in a bed: for the wetnefs of their cloaths, which is often the confequence of this expofure, is little regarded, and from the falubrity of the climate, is attended with little inconvenience.

Mr. Lucas's tent being fpread, the two Shereefs, with three of their friends, took up their quarters with him: and on the firft appearance of fupper, which was ferved in a large wooden difh, and confifted of dried meat, and of flour formed into balls, and dreffed in fteam, they all fat down with the familiarity of near relations, and dipping their right hands into the difh, without either fpoons or forks or knives, devoured, with a voracious and difgufting hafte, the whole that was fet before them.

The conclufion of the meal was followed by the ceremony of wafhing, which confifted in each man's dipping his right hand into the fame water which his companions had ufed. Coffee being then brought in, they lighted their pipes, and each of them having drank three or four difhes as he fmoaked, they laid themfelves down in their cloaths, upon the bare fand, and converfed together till they talked themfelves to fleep.

February 2d. The next morning, at day-break, the drivers began to re-load the camels: at eight o'clock the caravan was again in motion; from which time till half an hour after four, they travelled amidft dreary hills of loofe and barren fand, where they faw neither man nor beaft, neither wood nor water,

A fmall valley between the hills, from which, to their great annoyance, the fhifting fand was continually blown down upon them, was the place of their encampment; a place entirely deftitute of water, but from this circumftance they felt no fort of inconvenience, as they had brought with them, in goat fkins, ans ample ftore.

February 3d. At half an hour after feven in the morning, they proceeded on their journey, and having emerged from the fand hills about two in the afternoon, were charmed with the fight of olive and of date trees, of large quantities of white thorn, and of the Spanifh broom; yet the foil is dry and floney, and the few fields of grain which prefent themfelves here and there to the eye, eye, exhibit in their fcanty and meagre appearance, the marks of an ungracious and fullen vegetation.

On the right or S. E. of their road, at the diftance of about twenty miles, the mountains of Guariano and Miffelata rife upon the view.---A fight that recals to the mind of the experienced Traveller, and leads him to relate to the Atranger, the beauty of the vales, the richnefs of the lands, abounding in corn and oil, and the fierce inhofpitable difpofition of the inhabitants, that compels the caravan to turn from their dominions, its direct and antient road, and to take its courfe among the defolate hills, and dreary waftes of the fandy and barren coaft.*

A requeft

[^0]A requeft from the Shereef Fouwad was now made to Mr. Lucas for his confent to encamp that evening in the neighbourhood of an old Arab, his particular friend, with whom he had bufinefs to tranfact, but whofe refidence was two hours march to the South of their road. They accordingly turned to the South, and about five o'clock, after a tedious and difficult paffage among rocky hills, they approached the tents of the Arab: The old gentleman, accompanied by his two fons and a few attendants, came forward to meet them; and after expreffing great fatisfaction at the fight of his friend, the Shereef, he ordered $x$ tent to be cleared for their reception, and in the mean time conducted them to a mat and carpet, which his fervants had fpread for them under a hedge; for, notwithftanding the feafon of the year, the heat was already troublefome. They had not been feated long when their hoft invited them to their tent, in which a number of mats and carpets were neatly laid.---A fheep was killed, and fent to be dreffed for their fuppers; bowls of buttermilk were brought for their prefent refrefhment, and barley in abundance was given to fuch of their cattle as were accuftomed to that kind of food; while the camels, as ufual, were fent to feed among the hills.

At eight o'clock the fupper was brought to the tent, and was placed before them in two large wooden difhes. Of thefe the firft contained the mutton, which was boiled, and cut into fmall pieces: the other was filled with a boiled pafte of dried barley meal, made up in the form of an Englifh pudding, and furrounded with a great quantity of oil. This difh, which was intended as an accompaniment to the mutton, and which is in much eftimation at Tripoli, is called bazeen.

While Mr. Lucas tafted of the laft, and eat with pleafure of the firft of thefe difhes, and the Fezzaners, with their ufual difpatch, were devouring the contents of both, the old man and his fons ftood by to fupply them with water and buttermilk; for the rules of the Arab hofpitality require, that during their meals the mafter of the houfe fhould wait upon his guefts.

Feb. 4th. The next morning, at feven o'clock, the entertainment was repeated, with the fame marks of a kind and liberal welcome; for the old man is rich in corn and cattle, and having obtained the character of a Muffelman Saint, or Maraboot, is, on that account, exempted from the payment of taxes.

After a march of three hours, during which the rout was perplexed, and the eye fatigued by a continued fucceffion of rocky hills, the caravan arrived at the entrance of an extenfive and beautiful plain, that every where exhibited a luxuriant growth of olive trees, intermixed with dates.

The next two hours brought them to the fea coaft, and to all that now exitts of the town of Lebida, where, in the ruins of a temple, and in the much more perfect remains of feveral triumphal arches, the Traveller contemplates the magnificence of an antient Roman colony; and difcovers, in the beauty and fertile appearance of the adjoining plain, the reafons which led them to chufe, for a fea-port town, a fituation that furnifhes no natural harbour.

Eaftward of the ruins, for about five and twenty miles, the foil, though entirely unaided by the poor Arabs who inhabit it, exhibits the fame luxuriant vegetation; and the fcene is rendered ftill more interefting by the remains of a fupendous aqueduet, which formerly conveyed to Lebida the water of a diftant hill.

At half an hour after five, and in the neighbourhood of a miferable village, the caravan encamped for the night.

Feb. 5th. The next day's journey, which was attended with nothing remarkable, and during which they followed the line of the coaft, brought them to Zuleteen, an inconfiderable town, where they found that a boat, to which a part of their baggage was intrufted, had been compelled by a ftorm to depofit her cargo. From this circumftance, and the neceffity which followed it, of hiring fix additional camels for their goods, the departure of the caravan on the next day (February 6th) was retarded till two o'clock in the afternoon. At the end of the firft hour's march, they were informed by fome friendly Arabs, who were moving: their tents and cattle, for the fake of protection, to the fuburbs of the town, that on the preceding afternoon a party of the rebel tribe of Hooled Benfoliman, from the neighbouring hills, had attacked a fmall caravan belonging to Mefurata, and after killing four of the people, had carried off the camels and baggage:-and they were alfo informed, that on that very morning two men, who were going from Mefurata to the market, which is held at fome diftance from the town, were robbed and killed by the fame party. At this news a Council was fummoned to determine on the prudence of attempting to proceed; for the Shereefs began to diftrult the fufficiency of that title to an exemption from the violence of war, on which, when the danger was diftant, they had fo confidently relied. The opinion of Mr. Lucas being afked, he obferved, that as the party which committed the depredations were defcribed as not more than forty or fifty in number, and were confequently much too weak to refift the detachment that, they muft be fure, would be fent from Mefurata to revenge the violences of which they had been guilty, he had not the fmalleft doubt of their being already returned to the refuge of their mountains; but that at any rate, their own numbers, confidering how well they were armed, were amply fufficient to defend them from the attacks of fuch petty marauders: Pleafed with an opinion which gave them the profpect of but little danger, they frefh primed their mufkets and piftols, and finging as they went, drove merrily on.

$$
\mathrm{K} \quad \text { of }
$$

At fix o'clock they encamped upon a hill directly oppofite to the enemy's mountains, that were now within twelve or fifteen miles; and having lighted, by Mr. Lucas's advice, about feventy fires, for which the dry brufh-wood that was near them furninhed the means, they had foon the fatisfaction of obferving, that the fires of the enemy, who probably miftook them for the troops of Mefurata, were all extinguifhed.

Feb. 7 th. The next morning at day-break, in the midft of a ftorm from the S.W. of violent rain and wind, they left the hill; and after a tempeftuous march of fourhours, they difcerned through the heavy atmofphere, which now began to clear, a party of fifty or

$$
K .2
$$

or fixty Arabs upon a rifing ground, at a diftance, to the left.--That more were concealed behind the hill, they had not the fmalleft doubt ; but as efcape was impoffible, and confultation ufelefs, they refolved unanimoufly to make rather than receive the attack. The Shereef Fouwad took the command, and having given the charge of the camels to the three Negros and their wives, with orders to drive them flowly, and keep them clofe together, led on the reft of the party. The horfe, with the Shereef at theirhead, formed the van, while thofe on foot were mixed together in a croud, dancing, and fhouting, and twirling their mufkets over their heads, and ruming round each other like madmen, till they came within fhot of their antagonifts, when they fuddenly difperfed, and each man fquatted down behind a bufh, to fhelter himfelf and take a furer aim. The horfe were now clofe upon the enemy, and were levelling their pieces at the foremoft; when one of the latter laid down his mufket, and called to them: not to fire, for they were friends.

A moment's paufe was followed by a mutual recollection, and they exhibited, on both fides, the moft extravagant marks of joy. They ran round each other like a flock of frighted fheep, and danced, and fhouted, and twirled their guns over their heads, till they were tired, when they fat down and began a reciprocal congratulation congratulation on their fafety. The ftrangers faid that they were herdfmen belonging to Mefurata ; that for want of pafturage near the town, they had brought their flocks to feed upon thefe hills; that they were 200 armed men, and that they did not fear the enemy.

After this information, and the exchange of civilities, the caravan continued its journey, and at fix in the evening arrived at Mefurata.

The Governor, whofe politenefs and natural good fenfe had been improved by a long refidence in Italy, received Mr. Lucas with marks of the greateft attention; but expreffed his fear that, while the war continued, the Shereefs would not be able to obtain from the Rebel Arabs, who alone could furnifh them, the i 20 camels which were requifite for the conveyance of their goods: and that, as the profpect of peace was at prefent remote, and the fultry feafon would foon commence, he faw but little chance of their reaching Fezzan before the following Winter.

Feb. 9th. Information was now received at Mefurata, that the Bey's army, which confifted of 1,500 horfe and 6,000 foot, was encamped within five hours march of the Rebels, whofe force was compofed of 600 horfe and 10,000 foot, and was commanded by a powerful Chief of the name of Séife Bennazar.

It was alfo faid, that the Tribes of the friendly Arabs, who formed the principal part of the Tripoline army, were too clofely connected, by intermarriages and the force of antient alliance, with many of the Rebel Clans, to bring with them to the battle that fort of zeal which Government could fafely truft.

Feb. roth. Such was the fituation of affairs when the Shereef Fouwad requefted from the Governor, to whom he was ftrongly recommended by the Minifter, a public and formal declaration, that if the hoftile Arabs would fend to Mefurata 120 camels, with their drivers, for the conveyance of the merchandize of the Shereefs to Fezzan, both they and their cattle fhould be perfectly fecure. The Governor replied, that by his own authority alone he could not, with either prudence or effect, announce to the Rebel Arabs fuch a ftipulation; but that he would fummon a Council of the Chiefs of the town, and would propofe the bufinefs to them; though he himfelf was perfuaded, that fhould they confent to the Shereef's requifition, as he hoped they would, the Rebel Arabs were much too cautious to rely on the good faith of fuch an engagement.

Feb.

Feb. rith. The next morning, a Council of fix of the principal inhabitants, with the Governor as Prefident, affembled in Mr.Lucas'stent, (for the Governor's own houfe was near the fea, at the diftance of fix miles from Mefurata) and unanimoufly agreed that a letter fhould be written by the Governor, and figned by himfelf and by all the Members of the Council, to affure the hoftile Arabs, that fuch of their camels and of their people, as they might fend at the requeft of the Shereef, fhould neither be detained or molefted within the jurifdiction of Mefurata. This letter, accompanied by one from the Shereef, in which he defired to be furnifhed with 120 camels for the carriage of his goods, was accordingly fent on that very day, by an exprefs, to a rebel province, in which he had many friends, and which is called Gouady.

Feb. 14 th. In three days from the time of his departure, the exprefs returned, and brought with him a reply, in which the Arabs obferved that, as the country was in arms, they could not with prudence truft their camels from under their own protection, much lefs could they fpare their people.

Notwithftanding this anfwer, the Shereef Fouwad conceived that the refufal of the Arabs was folely dictated by a diftruft of the the fort of fecurity which was offered by the Governor and Council of Mefurata; for independently of the doubts which the Arabs might entertain of their good faith, it was evident, that without the fanction of the Bey, who commanded the army, their engagement, at the utmoft, could not extend beyond their own jurifdiction. But if the Bey himfelf would guaranty the fafety of the camels and their drivers, by granting them a pafs, the Skereef concluded that the real objections of the Arabs would be entirely removed. With this view, on the 27 th of February, the Shereef and two of his countrymen fet out for the camp, which they reached on the fecond day, as it was not far from Mefurata; but their trouble was fruitlefs, for the Bey could not be prevailed on to affent to their propofal.

All hopes of obtaining, before the conclufion of the war, a fufficient conveyance for the goods being thus at an end, the Council refolved that, until peace fhould be eftablifhed, the Shereefs and the other Merchants of the caravan fhould be at liberty to warehoufe their packages in the public ftore-rooms of the Governor.

Deprived, in this manner, of all profpect of arriving this year at Fezzan, and doubtful if the flate of the country would encourage, or his own fituation permit the attempt in the Winter, Mr. Lucas refolved to avail himfelf to the utmoft of fuch means of information as the knowledge of his fellow-travellers enabled them to afford.

He had already difcovered that the little old Shereef Imhammed had been often employed by the King of Fezzan as his Factor in the Slave Trade; and in that capacity had travelled to Bornou and different parts of Nigritia; and he now determined to cultivate his friendfhip with double folicitude, and by occafional prefents and frequent converfation, to draw from him an account of the countries which he had feen. With this view he, one evening, took from his pocket his map of Africa, and after fatisfying the Shereef's curiofity as to its nature and ufe, told him that he once intended it as a prefent to the King of Fezzan; but, that having difcovered in it feveral miftakes, he now propofed to draw another that fhould be more correct. The Shereef replied, that the King would be highly gratified with fuch a prefent. Mr. Lucas faid, that if he would affitt him with an account of the diftances from place to place, in fuch parts of the country as he had vifited, and with their names in Arabic, and would alfo fatisfy him as to fuch queftions as he fhould afk, he would prepare two correated copies of the map, and would give one of them to the King and the other to himfelf. The Shereef was delighted with the propofal; and they immediately retired to a fand hill at fome diftance from the tent, that their converfation might be unreferved and uninterrupted. Many fucceffive days were employed in the fame manner; and as Mr. Lucas wrote down, at the time, the information which he obtained, he was foon poffeffed of fuch an account of Fezzan, Bornou, and Nigritia, efpecially of the two former, as much diminifhed the chagrin of his own difappointment.

One afternoon, as they fat together on the cuftomary hill, they were fuddenly difturbed by the loud fcreams and difmal howlings of all the women of Mefurata---a mode of alarming and collecting the men, which is always practifed among the Arabs, on the approach of thieves, or of an invading enemy.

In a few minutes the townfmen were under arms, and together with the Shereef Fouwad, the other Fezzaners, and Mr. Lucas's Black, went haftily on to the place where the Rebels were faid to have appeared:---there they found that the women had been deceived. It feems an afs had ftrayed into a field of barley; and as the owner of the corn, who was armed, and happened to pafs by at the time, went into the field to drive out the animal, mal, the women miftook him for one of the Rebels, and conceiving that many more were concealed, (for they often come down from the mountains to fteal the cattle) had given the ufual alarm.

In a few minutes, Mr. Lucas and the old Shereef, who had both continued on the hill, obferved the Fezzaners coming fulkily back, and curfing the women for fo foolifh a difturbance, whilft the townfmen, on the contrary, fired their pieces, and rejoiced in their difappointment as much as if they had conquered an army.

A few days afterwards, a fecond alarm was given, and with much more reafon than the firtt; for a party of the Rebel Arabs, fome on horfeback, and others on foot, had fuddenly appeared within two miles of the town, and after killing two herdfmen, and feizing three Black flaves, their affiftants, had carrried off fixty goats, fourteen cows, and three camels.

The attack was made at a time when moft of the townfmen were at the market, which is held at the diftance of three miles from Mefurata; and to add to their indignation, it was made in a place which hitherto had been deemed inviolable; for the land on

$$
L_{2}
$$

on which the cattle were feeding was confidered as under the immediate protection of a departed Saint, whofe remains were buried there, and whofe fanctuary, it was thought, no Muffelman, however accuftomed to robbery and blood, could venture to profane.

March 13 th. Letters by exprefs from the camp were now received by the Governor, which announced, that in confequence of the Bey's having entered the country of the Rebels, and turned his cattle to pafture in their corn, an engagement, which foon became general, had enfued; that after a lofs of 150 men, the Rebels had retired to the mountains; and that the Bey, at the expence in killed and wounded, of not more than twenty-fix horfe and feventy or eighty foot, had obtained poffeffion of ten: or twelve thoufand fheep, and of three hundred camels.

Mr. Lucas congratulated the Governor on the victory, who thanked him; but "I fear," faid he, fhaking his head, " that the news requires confirmation. There was a time, indeed, when the people of Tripoli knew how to conquer, and the Arabs trembled at the fight of an encampment."

March I5th. On the next day but one, accounts were brought by by different perfons who arrived from the camp, that there had indeed been a fkirmifh, in their relation of which they varied much from each other; but they all agreed that the Bey had loft a greater number of men, and that the only cattle which he had obtained, were a few camels and fome fheep that the ftraggling parties from the camp had feized.

Wearied with fruitlefs expectations of a peace, difappointed in their expedients, and warned by the increafing heat, that the feafon for a journey to Fezzan was already paft, the Shereefs now refolved to proceed to the intended places of their Summer refidence.

The Shereef Fouwad retired to Wadan, his native town; and the Shereef Imhammed, with tears in his eyes, and an earneft prayer that he might fee his friend Mr. Lucas again in November, retired to the mountains, where he had many acquaintance, and could live at a fmall expence.

March 20th. A few days afterwards, Mr. Lucas took leave of the Governor, to whofe civilities he had been much indebted, and having accompanied a fmall caravan as far as Lebida, embarked in a coafting veffel at the neighbouring village of Legatah, and went by fea to Tripoli, where the Bafhaw, upon whom he waited, and to whom with many acknowledgments he returned the mule, not only received him with great kindnefs, but expreffed his hope that better fortune would attend him another year.

April 6th. From Tripoli he failed for Malta, and after a tedious quarantine, which the fufpicion of the plague at Mefurata had much prolonged, he took his departure for Marfeilles, and on the 26th of July arrived in England.

INTRODUCTION

To

CHAPTER IV.

AN account has already been given of the opportunity which the length of his refidence in Mefurata afforded to Mr. Lucas, of obtaining from the Shereef Imhammed a defcription of the Kingdom of Fezzan, and of fuch of the countries beyond it to the South as the Shereef himfelf had vifited.

But though this intelligent ftranger had no difcoverable motive for deception, yet as the folitary evidence of any individual excites but a dubious belief, Mr. Lucas was anxious to learn from the Governor of Mefurata, who had formerly travelled to Fezzan, his idea of the truth of the Narrative. With this view he afked and received the Governor's permiffion to read to him the memorandums that the repeated converfations of Imhammed had enabled him to make.
" The Shereef's Account of Fezzan," faid the Governor, " my own knowledge confirms; and many of the particulars which he relates of Bornou and Cafhna I have heard from the report of others. His countrymen fay that he is better acquainted with both than any other individual among them; and fuch is the opinion which the King himfelf entertains of his probity, knowledge, and talents, that to his management is always entrufted whatever bufinefs in either of thofe empires his Sovereign bas to tranfact,"

But while Mr. Lucas, with a prudent and laudable caution, was thus endeavouring to afcertain the truth of the Shereef's account, another, and perhaps more decifive teft of its value was fortunately obtained in England.---For, before the return of Mr. Lucas, or the arrival of his papers, the Committee of the Affociation, affifted by Mr. Dodsworth, (whofe refidence of fourteen years in Barbary had given him a competent knowledge of Arabic) had procured from Ben Alli, a native of Morocco, at that time in London, an account of all thofe countries to the South of the Defart of Zahara, which, in the courfe of his extenfive Travels as a Merchant, he had formerly vifted: and though his remarks appear to be thofe of a fuperficial Obferver, who poffefles activity of firit rather than energy of mind, and whofe remembrance of whathe faw is impaired by the lapfe of near twenty years; yet, (as will be feen in the following pages) the general conformity of his defcription of Bornou to that which the Shereef has given, has an obvious tendency to ftrengthen the credit of the latter.

This flort account of the nature of the only external evidence that has yet been obtained in fupport of the following Narrative feemed to be due from the Committee; but in what degree that evidence is impreffive of belief, or what internal marks of authenticity the Work itfelf may afford, the judgment of others muft decide ; for on thefe points, it is evident that each individual muft determine for himfelf. In forming his opinion, however, it is requifite he fhould know, that while the moft anxious attention has been given to the faithful prefervation of the fonfe of the Original, an entire change has been made in its language and arrangement; a change which, the obvious advantage of methodizing converfations, as defultory as they were numerous, of feparating the blended accounts of unconnected objects, and of uniting a variety of broken and detached defcriptions of the fame thing, has unavoidably occafioned.

CHAPTERIV.

Rout from Mefurata-----Enumeration of the principal Towns of Fezzan---Account of its Climate and principal Productions--Defcription of the Manners, Religion, and Government of its People, their Revenue, Adminitration of Fuftice, and Military Force.

Fezzan, whofe fmall and circular domain is placed in the vaft Wildernefs, as an ifland in the midft of the ocean, is fituated to the South of Mefurata. A journey of eight days, through diftricts but little inhabited or improved, though naturally not unfertile, conducts the Traveller to the town of Wadan, where every requifite for the refrefhment of the caravan is found.----From thence, in five hours, he arrives at the forlorn village of M 2

Houn.

Houn, on the edge of the Defart of Soudah, on whofe black and obdurate foil, the bafis of which is a foft ftone, no vegetable but the Talk is feen to grow. To this tree, which is of the fize of the fmall Olive, and bears a fprig of yellow flowers, the hufbandman of Fezzan is indebted for the hard and lemon-coloured wood of which he forms the handles of his tools, and the frames of his larger inftruments. Having croffed the Defart, which furnifhes no water, and for the paffage of which four days are requifite, the Traveller accepts the refrefhments of a miferable village that affords him nothing but dates of the worft quality, fome brackifh water, and a fmall fupply of Indian corn, of the feccies called Gaffob. From Zéghen, by which name the village is diftinguifhed, a fingle day conducts him to the town of Sebbah, where the large remains of an antient caftle, built upon a hill, and other venerable ruins, that in point of extent are compared to thofe of Lebida, imprefs on his mind the melancholy idea of departed greatnefs; while, on the other hand, the humble dwellings of the modern inhabitants, and the rich vegetation of their neighbouring fields, prefent to his eye an ample ftore of all that is requifite for the fuftenance of man.-----Dates, barley, Indian corn, pompions, cucumbers, fig trees, pomegranates, and apricots, and for meaner purpofes, the white thorn and Spanifh broom are defcribed as but a part of the numerous vegetables that reward the induftry of the people. The animals in which they moft abound are faid to be the common fowl, and the brown longhaired and broad-tailed fheep.

From Sebbah a journey of two days tranfports the Traveller to Goddoua, a fmall town of fimilar produce; and from thence, in two days more, he arrives at Mourzouk, the capital of the kingdom of Fezzan.

This city ${ }^{*}$ is furrounded by a high wall, which not only furnifhes the means of defence, but affords to the Government an opportunity of collecting, at its three gates, a tax on all goods (though provifions are exempted) that are brought for the fupply of its people. Its diftance from Mefurata, which borders on the

* The capital of Fezzan is fituated on the banks of a fmall river, and is alfo fupplied with water from a multitude of fprings and wells.

Being formerly built with ftone, it fill retains the appellation of a Chriftian Town; and the medley which it prefents to the eye, of the vaft ruins of antient buildings, and of the humble cottages of earth and fand that form the dwellings of its prefent Arab inhabitants, is fingulary grotefque and ftrange.
the coaft, and with refpect to which its fituation is nearly South, is about ${ }^{*} 390$ miles.

Eaftward of Mourzouk, and fituated in a diftrict of remarkable fertility, is the town of Zuéela, in which the remnants of antient buildings, the number and fize of the cifterns, and the conftruction of the vaulted caves, intended perhaps as repofitories for corn, exhibit fuch veftiges of antient fplendour, as will probably attract, and may highly reward the attention of the future Traveller,

To the South of Zuéela, and nearly at the fame diftance from the capital, is the town of Jermah, which, like Zuéela, is diftinguifhed by the numerous herds, efpecially of fheep and goats, that

> * In this eftimate of difance, the rate of travelling is fuppofed to be twenty-two miles per day:-a conclufion that arifes from the time that was employed by Mr. Lucas in travelling from Tripoli to Mefurata; for in that journey of I 50 miles, feven days weere confumed; and thougb the caravan was detained for a ferw hours on the fea coaft, and was employed during four more in pafing to and from the tents of the Arab, yet thefe loffes were probably compenfated by the extraordinary difpatch with which, in confequence of their fears, the greateff part of the journey was performed.
that are feen around it; by the various and abundant produce of its adjacent fields; and by numerous and majeftic ruins, that exhibit to the ignorant inhabitants of its clay-built cottages infcriptions of which they know not the meaning, and veftiges of greatnefs to which they are perfectly indifferent.

Teffouwa, a confiderable town, is alfo fituated to the Eaftward of the capital; but feems to have no claim to particular attention. Near this town, a river which the Shereef defcribes as overwhelmed in the moving fands, but which he remembers a deep and rapid ftream, had formerly its courfe.

More remote from Mourzouk, being diftant from it in a N.E. direction, about 120 miles, is the large town of Temmiffa. Here the caravan of Pilgrims from Bornou and Nigritia, which takes its departure from Mourzouk, and travels by the way of Cairo to Mecca, ufually provides the ftores of corn and dates, and dried meat, that are requifite for its dreary paffage.
S. E. from the capital, and diftant from it about fixty miles, is the fmall town of Kattrón, which feems to be remarkable for nothing but the quantity which it breeds of the common fowl, and for the abundant crops of Indian corn which the neighbouring lands afford.

Very differently diffinguifhed is the town, or rather the province, of Mendrah, for though much of its land is a continued level of hard and barren foil, the quantity of Trona, a fpecies of foffil alkali that floats on the furface, or fettles on the banks of its numerous fmoaking lakes, has given it a higher importance than that of the moft fertile diftricts.

Of this valuable produce great quantities are annually brought by the Merchants of Fezzan to Tripoli, from whence it is fhipped for Turkey and Tunis, and the dominions of the Emperor of Morocco. The people of the latter employ it as an ingredient in the red dye of the leather, for which they are famous, and in that of the woollen caps that are worn by the Arabs and the Moors as the bafis of their turbans.

The fituation of Mendrah is nearly South from the capital, and is diffant from it about fixty miles.

To the account which has been given of the principal towns of Fezzan, that of Tegérhy alone remains to be added. It is but but a fmall town, is fituated S. W. of the capital, about eighty miles, and collects from its lands but little other produce than dates and Indian corn. The territory of Fezzan, to the Weftward of the capital, appears to extend but a little way; for on that fide, the fullen barrennefs of the Defart, more effectually than the ftrongeft human power, prefcribes a limit to the purfuits of Avarice and to the efforts of Ambition.

Of the fmaller towns of Fezzan, and of its fcattered villages, the number of which, including that of the towns, is faid to be little lefs than one hundred, the Shereef has given no particular defcription.

The towns themfelves appear to be chiefly inhabited by hufbandmen and fhepherds; for, though they alfo contain the Merchants, the Artificers, the Minifters of Religion, and the Officers of the Executive Government ; yet, the bufinefs of agriculture and pafturage feems to be the principal occupation of the natives of Fezzan.

In every town a market for butcher's meat, and corn, and fruit, and garden vegetables, is regularly held. Mutton and goats flefh are fold by the quarter, without being weighed; the ufual price of a quarter of a goat or theep is from thirty-two to forty grains of gold duft, or from four to five fhillings of Englifh money. The flefh of the camel, which is much more highly valued, is commonly fold at a dearer rate, and is divided into fmaller lots.

The houfes, like thofe of the little villages in the neighbourhood of Tripoli, are built of clay, and are covered with a flat roof, that is compofed of the boughs and branches of trees, on which a quantity of earth is laid. Inartificial and defective as this covering appears, it is fuited to the climate: for as rain is never known in Fezzan, the principal requifites of a roof are fhelter from the dews, and protection from the fun.

The heats of the Summer, which begins in April and continues till November, are fo intenfe, that, from nine in the morning till fun-fet, the ftreets are frequented only by the labouring people, and even in the houfes refpiration would be difficult, if the expedient of wetting the apartments did not furnifh its falutary aid. Of this torrid clime the fiercenefs is chiefly felt from the month of May to the latter end of Auguft ; during which period, the courfe of the wind is ufually from the E. the S.E. the S. or the S. W. and though from the two latter points it blows with violence, the heat is often fuch as to threaten inftant fuffocation; but if it happens to change, as, for a few days, it fometimes does, to the W. or N. W. a reviving frefhnefs immediately fucceeds.

The drefs of the inhabitants of Fezzan is fimilar to that of the Moors of Barbary. The immediate covering of the body confifts of a pair of large trowfers, of linen or cloth, which defcends to the fimall of the leg, and of a fhirt, which is wide in the fleeves, but loofe at the breaft, and the fkirts of which hang over and conceal the upper part of the trowfers. Next to the fhirt is worn a kind of waiftcoat, which in fhape refembles the fhirt, except that it has no fleeves, and that it reaches no lower than the waift; and to the waiftcoat is fuperadded a jacket, with tight fleeves which extend to the wrift, but which are left unbuttoned and open from the wrift almoft to the elbow. Thus far their drefs may be faid to be fimilar to that of a Britifh feaman, its colour excepted, and except too, that the fhirt is not open at the breaft, that the waiftcoat is not faftened with buttons, but is put on like the fhirt, and that the bottom of the fhirt hangs down on the outfide of the trowfers.

Over the jacket is worn a loofe robe, which reaches below the knee, and the fleeves of which, though wider than thofe of the jacket, are made in the fame form, and, like them, are left open at the wrift.

$$
\mathrm{N}_{2}
$$

A girdle of crimfon filk binds the robe to the waift; and a long cloth (called a barakan or alhaique) of the fhape of a Highlander's plaid, and worn in the fame way, is thrown over the whole. The legs, as far as the calves, to which the trowfers defcend, are covered with a kind of fhort ftockings, which are made of leather, and are laced like the half boot of an Englifhman. The feet are accommodated with flippers; and the head is protected by a red woollen cap, which is incircled by the folds of a filk or muflin turban.

Ample as this cloathing may appear, the further provifion of a long cloak with a large hood is often confidered as requifite. It is called a burnoofe, and in fine weather is ufually carried on the fhoulder.

Such, when complete, is the drefs of the inhabitants of Fezzan. But in the Summer months the common people have no other covering than the drawers, which decency requires; and the caps, which protect their heads from the immediate action of the fun, for in other refpects their bodies are compleatly naked.

Nature

Nature and cuftom have formed their conftitutions to fuch high degrees of heat, that any approach to the common temperament of Europe entirely deftroys their comfort; for Mr. Lucas often obferved, in his journey to Mefurata, that when the fcorching heat of the noon-day beams had compelled him to feek the fhade, his fellow-travellers, efpecially if the wind was in the North, laid themfelves down, upon the fand in the open fun, in order to receive a double portion of his warmth; and when, as their cuftom was, they enquired after his health, they, almoft always, concluded with the exprefiion, "Heack m'andick berd,". we hope you are not cold.

The Difeafes that are moft frequent in Fezzan are thofe of the inflammatory, and thofe of the putrid kind.

The fmall-pox is common among the inhabitants; violent head-achs attack them in the Summer; and they are ofter afflicted with rheumatic pains.

Their old women are their principal phyficians. For pains in the head they prefcribe cupping and bleeding; for pains in the limbs they fend their patients to bathe in the hot lakes, which produce
produce the trona; and for obftinate achs and ftrains, and long continued fiffnefs in the mufcles, they have recourfe, like the horfe-doctors of Europe and the phyficians of Barbary, to the application of a burning iron.

The ufe of the ftrongeft oils, and of the moft powerful herbs, is alfo frequent among them.

To the nature of their climate the greateft part of their difeafes is probably owing; and to this caufe they are certainly indebted for the extraordinary multitude of noxious and of loathfome animals that infeft their country. Adders, fnakes, fcorpions, and toads, are the conftant inhabitants of their fields, their gardens, and their houfes. The air is crowded with mofquitos; and perfons of every rank are over-run with all the different kinds of vermin that attack the beggars of Europe; and though in the Summer the fleas entirely difappear, the inhabitants are fcarcely fenfible of relief.

In their perfons, the natives of Fezzan incline to the Negro much more than to the Arab caft. Thofe who travelled with Mr. Lucas from Tripoli to Mefurata, and who were fourteen in number, number, had fhort curly black hair, thick lips, flat broad nofes, and a dark" 1 kin, which, either from their habitual naftinefs, the vermin with which they are covered, or the natural ranknefs of their perfpiration, emits the moft naufeous and fetid effluvia. They are tall, but not ftrong; well fhaped, yet indolent, inactive, and weak; and though the Shereef Fouwad is defcribed as majeftic in his appearance, yet his countrymen, in general, are confidered at Tripoli as a people of remarkable uglinefs.

In their common intercourfe with each other all diftinctions of rank appear to be forgotten; for the Shereef and the loweft plebeian, the rich and the poor, the mafter and the man, converfe familiarly, and eat and drink together. Generous and eminently hofpitable, the Fezzanner, let his fare be fcanty or abundant, is ever defirous that others fhould partake of his meal; and if twenty people fhould unexpectedly vifit his dwelling, they muft all participate as far as it will go.

When they fettle their money tranfactions, they fquat down upon the ground, and having levelled a fpot with their hands, make make dots as they reckon; and if they find themfelves wrong, they fmooth the fpot again, and repeat the calculation. All this time the by-ftanders, though they have nothing to do with the bufinefs, are as eager to put in their word, and to correct miftakes, as if the affair was their own. Even in common converfation, if they fit without doors, they level the fand in order to go on with their difcourfe, and at every fentence mark it with their fingers.

[^1]Ben Allit.

An extenfive plain, encompaffed by mountains, the irregular circle of which is interrupted on the Weft, where it feems to communicate with the Defart, compofes the Kingdom of Fezzan. To the influence of the neighbouring heights it may poffibly be owing, that in Fezzan, as in the Upper Egypt, the fituation of which is extremely fimilar, no rain is ever known to fall.

A light fand conftitutes the general foil ; and fand hills of various forms are feen in particular diftricts; but though the character of the furface and the drynefs of the Heavens may feem to announce an eternal fterility, yet the fprings are fo abundant, and fo ample a ftore of fubterraneous water is fupplied by the adjacent heights, that few regions in the North of Africa exhibit exhibit a richervegetation. From wells of eight or ten feet deep, with feveral of which every garden and every field are furnifhed, the hufbandman waters, at fun-rife, the natural or artificial productions of his land. Of thefe the principal are,

The Talk, a tree that in fize refembles the fmall Olive. It flowers in yellow fprigs, and fupplies the hard and lemon-coloured wood, from which the handles and frames of the Fezzanner's inftruments of huibandry are made:

The White Thorn:

A kind of brufhwood that refembles the Spanifh broom :
The Date tree, which is common:
The Olive and the Lime, which are defcribed as fcarce; the Apricot, the Pomegranate, and the Fig:

Indian corn and barley, the two favourite objects of the Fezzanner's cultivation:

Wheat, of which but little is raifed:

Pompions or calabafh, carrots, cucumbers, onions, and garlick.

Of the tame animals that are raifed in Fezzan, the Shereef enumerates,

The Sheep, which is defcribed as of a light brown colour ; as having a broad tail, and as cloathed with a fpecies of hair rather than of wool:

The Cow, which does not feem to be common, except in a few diftricts in which the pafture is excellent:

The Goat, and the Camel:

A fpecies of the domentic fowl of Europe.
The wild animals of the country are;

The Oftrich:

Antelopes of various kinds, one of which is called the Huaddee, and is celebrated for the fingular addrefs with which, when chafed by the hunter amidft its craggy heights, it plunges from the
the precipice, and lighting on its hams without danger of purfuit, continues till evening in the vale below:

A fpecies of deer of a fmaller fize than the common park deer of England. Its head, neck, and back, are of a brownifh red; and a pale ftreak of the fame colour, running on a white ground, is continued on each fide from the haunch to the hoof: the reft of the body is of a clear and delicate white. Such, if the Fezanners are to be credited, is the cleanlinefs of its temper, or fuch, more probably, is its dinlike to the chill of a watery foil, that during the autumnal rains, which fall in the Defarts of Zahara, where it chiefly inhabits, no traces of its laying down have ever yet been feen. In the fillnefs of the night it often ventures to the corn fields of Fezzan, where, in traps prepared for the purpofe, it is fometimes taken.

The food of the lower claffes of the people confifts of the flour of Indian corn, feafoned with oil; of dates, apricots, and pomegranates, and of calabafhes, cucumbers, and garden roots.

Perfons of a fuperior rank are alfo fupplied with wheat bread, which is baked in their own houfes; with mutton, goats flefh, the flefh of the camel, and that of the antelope; and with a great variety of fruits, and of garden vegetables.

Fezzan produces a fufficiency of falt for the confumption of its own inhabitants.

The water in general has a mineral tafte; yet fome of the fprings are pure ; but the favourite beverage confifts of a liquor which the date tree, like the palm, affords. At firft it poffeffes the mild flavour and cooling quality of orgeat; but acquires, when fermented, an acefcent tafte and intoxicating ftrength that are ftill more highly valued.

To the palm the lofs of fo large a proportion of its fap is generally fatal ; but the hardier date tree recovers from its wound, and in the courfe of two or three years regains its former health.

In their Religion the people of Fezzan are rigid Mahometans ; not intolerant to the opinions of others, but ftrict and fuperftitious in the obfervance of their own.

The Government of Fezzan is purely monarchical; but its powers, which feem to be reftricted by the influence of opinion, are are adminiftered with fuch paternal regard to the happinefs of the people, the rights of property are fo much revered, the taxes are fo moderate, and the courfe of juftice is directed by fo firm, and yet fo temperate a hand, that the inhabitants of Fezzan (as far as a judgment can be formed from the feelings of thofe who travelled with Mr. Lucas) are affectionately and ardently attached to their Sovereign.*

The prefent King, Mohammed Ben Mohammed, is defcended from one of the Shereefs of Tafilet, in the kingdom of Morrocco, who was related to the Regal Family of that empire, and who, about 400 years fince, obtained poffeffion of the Crown of Fezzan.

From that period to the middle of the prefent century, the kingdom maintained its Independence; but at the latter æra, the Bafhaw of Tripoli invaded it with a powerful force, laid fiege

[^2]fiege to the capital, defeated, and took captive the King, and carried him a prifoner to Tripoli. For two years the unfortunate Monarch was detained in bondage, but at the end of that period, on the condition of an annual tribute of fifty flaves and ten pounds of gold duft, the Bafhaw reftored him to his Crown.

Till the acceffion of the prefent King of Fezzan, this tribute was faithfully tranfmitted; but the reigning Sovereign, confcious of the declining power of Tripoli, and of the internal ffrength which the affection and confidence of his people had given to his Kingdom, has gradually diminifhed the amount, and altered the nature of the acknowledgement ; for it now confifts in an occafional prefent of a few flaves, and of a pound or two of gold duft, and is rather the compliment of a trading State to the Kingdom in which its principal commodities are fold, than a proof of political dependence. Still, however, the expreffion of $m y$ Kingdom of Fezzan is in frequent ufe with the reigning Bafhaw of Tripoli, who is the grandfon of the Conqueror ; nor has the dependence of the former State on the latter been ever directly renounced,*

* When I was at Fezzan, about twenty years ago, the actual government was committed to an Alcaid, who received his annual appointment from the Bafhaw of Tripoli.

In Fezzan, as in all the Countries in which the Mahometan Faith is eftablifhed, the defcendants of the Prophet are confidered as a diftinct and highly privileged order. Their property is facred; their perfons are inviolable; and while the colour of their turbans, and the revered title of Shereef, announce to the people the auguft dignity which they bear, they derive from the hereditary nature of their privileges a high degree of permanent influence, and fometimes of dangerous power.*

Among the privileges of their rank may be numbered an exemption from certain punifhments, and that fort of general indulgence which the prevalent dread of fhedding the blood of the Prophet unavoidably creates.
-To thefe circumftances of diftinction it is owing that, like the Nobility of other States, they are fometimes fubjected to, and feel a particular apprehenfion of the penalty of difhonour, efpecially of that of having duft thrown upon their heads.

But

[^3]But great as the privileges of this high order unqueftionably are, the individuals who compofe it have no union or general concert with each other; for neither in contefts for power, nor in refiftance to oppreffion, do they ever act as a body.

Some of the clafs are devoted to the indolence of a religious life; but a larger proportion is engaged in the active concerns and progreffive purfuits of commerce: for, in general, the defcendants of Mahomet, following the example of their great anceftor, are either Princes or Merchants.

The Revenue of Fezzan is compofed of a variety of branches, the principal of which are,

Ift, A tax on towns and villages, at the rate of from 100 to 500 mitkals each. The number of towns and villages is eftimated at 100; and the value of a mitkal at about ten fhillings Englifh : confequently, the tax on each town and village is from 501 . to 250 . fterling.

2d, A tax on every camel's load of goods (provifions for the market excepted) which enters the capital. The rate of this impoft is one mitkal, or ten fhillings Englifh, per load.

3d, The 3d, The fines that are inflicted as a punifhment for offences.

4th, The produce of fuch lands as on the death of the poffeffors, without heirs, efcheat to the Crown, 5th, A fmall tax on all gardens and date trees.

To thefe feveral branches of revenue may be added, as another fource of confiderable income, the commerce in which the King is engaged ; for he feems, efpecially in the articles of trona and fenna, to be the principal Merchant in his kingdom.

Gold duft conftitutes among the people of Fezzan the chief medium of payment; and value in that medium is always expreffed by weight.

Their common meafures of weight, and confequently of value, are,

The xarobe (or harrobe) the weight of which is four grains, and which expreffes the value of thirty-three piaftres of Tripoli, or 6d. fterling.

The mitkal, the weight of which is eighty-one grains, and which expreffes the value of $668 \div$ Tripoli piaftres, or 10 , $1 \frac{1}{8} \mathrm{~d}$.

A fingle grain therefore is equal in value to $1_{\frac{1}{2}}^{\mathrm{I}} \mathrm{d}$.

In the choice of the firft of thefe meafures, the xarobe, they feem to have been influenced by the difcovery, ift, That four grains is the ufual weight of a hard and durable berry, * which is called habbat ell goreth; and 2 dly, That half that weight, two grains, is the weight of another and very beautiful berry, which is brought from Nigritia, and to which, from its fcarlet colour, and the black ftroke that ornaments one of its ends, they have given the name of eyne-deeka, or the cock's eye. Thefe berries are therefore employed as the common weights for gold duft in Fezzan ; for the xarobe and the mitkal have only an ideal exiftence.

But

[^4]But for the greater convenience of exchange, the Merchants of Fezzan are generally furnihed with fmall papers of gold duft, of different values, from that of two xarobes, or one fhilling, to fuch an amount as their bufinefs is likely to require.

If the value of the article to be purchafed is lefs than two xarobes, the payment is generally made in corn or flour. Thus the fmaller articles of provifions, as eggs, onions, &ic. are generally purchafed by a proportionable value in corn.
TABLE.

One grain (in weight) of gold is equal to $\left\{\begin{array}{l}8 \frac{1}{4} \text { piaftres of Tripoli, } \\ I_{2}^{\prime} d \text {. fterling. }\end{array}\right.$

Four grains ditto are equal to $\left\{\begin{array}{l}\text { I xarobe of Fezzan, } \\ 33 \text { piaftres of Tripoli, } \\ \text { 6d. fterling. }\end{array}\right.$

Eight grains ditto are equal to $\left\{\begin{array}{l}8: \text { piaftres of Tripoli, } \\ \text { İd. fterling. }\end{array}\right.$

(* I mitkal (an imaginary coin of Fezzan)
660 piaftres of Tripoli, Ios. fterling.

In this view of the currency of Fezzan, the fmall fractions that would be requifite to render it perfectly accurate are omitted.

A mitkal is 675 piaftres of Tripoli, or a fraction more than IOS. İd. fterling, and confequently it exceeds, by a fraction, the amount of 20 xarobes.

The grains of Fezzan are of the fame $\dagger$ weight as in England,

* In the neighbourhood Tombuctou a gold mitgan is worth about 10s. 6d. fterling* Ben Alli.
$\uparrow \mathrm{Mr}$. Lucas found by bis medicine fales, that the pea called babbat ell goreth, wwich is ufed in Fezzan for a weeight of four grains, is exactly equal to four grains Englifb.

In England one grain of gold is worth 2d.-one penny-weight is woorth 4s. -and one ounce is worth 4l. Aerling.
land, but the okea, or ounce of Fezzan, is very different, for it contains 640 grains; whereas the Englifh ounce contains but 480 , which is a fourth lefs.

A Fezzan ounce of gold therefore, or 640 grains, at I d. per grain, mult be worth in Fezzan 4l.

And an Englifh ounce of gold, or 480 grains, at $\mathrm{I}_{\frac{1}{2}} \mathrm{~d}$. per grain, muft be worth in Fezzan 31.

Among the circumftances for which the natives of Fezzan, who travelled with Mr. Lucas, confidered their Sovereign as eminently diftinguifhed, they often mentioned his juft and impartial, but fevere and determined adminiftration of juftice; and as a proof of the afcendancy which, in this refpect, he has acquired over the minds of his fubjects, they defcribed the following cuftom:---If any man has injured another, and refufes to go with him to the Judge, the complainant, drawing a circle round the oppreflor, folemnly charges him, in the King's name, not to leave the place till the Officers of Juftice, in fearch of whom he is going, fhall arrive: and fuch (if they are to be credited) is, on the one hand, his fear of the punifhment which is inflicted on thofe who difobey the injunction, and fo great, on the other, is his dread of the perpetual banifhment which, if he feeks his fafety by withdrawing from the kingdom, muft be his inevitable lot, that this imaginary prifon operates as a real confinement, and the offender fubmiffively waits the arrival of the Officers of the Judge.

Small offences are punifhed by the baftinado: but thofe of a greater magnitude fubject the conviet, according to the different degrees of guilt, to the penalty of a fine, of imprifonment, or of death.---Shereefs, like the Nobility of other States, are fometimes punifhed, as was mentioned before, by the pain of difhonour; in which clafs of punifhments, the moft dreaded, becaufe the moft reproachful, is the indignity of having duft heaped upon their heads.

To their infulated and remote fituation, and to their natural barrier of defolate mountains and dreary waftes of fand, much more than to military ftrength, the people of Fezzan are indebted for their fecurity.

Trufting to this natural defence, their towns are without guards, and, their capital excepted, are alfo without walls; nor have they any regular ftanding force: yet the Shereef conceives that that 15 or 20,000 troops might, upon an emergency, be raifed. The only expedition of a military nature that has happened within his remembrance, was undertaken on the following ac-count:---

South-Eaft of the capitaI, at the diftance of 150 miles, is a wide and fandy defart, entirely barren, and oppreffed with a fuffocating heat. Immediately beyond this defart, the width of which is about 200 miles, the mountains of Tibefti, inhabited by a wild and favage people of that name, begin to take their rife. Ferocious in their manners, free-booters in their principles, and fecure, as they thought, in the natural defences of their fituation, thefe independent mountaineers became the terror of the caravans which traded from Fezzan to Bomou, and which are obliged to pafs the Weftern extremity of the Dofart. But at length, having plundered a caravan which belonged to the King himfelf, and having killed about twent: of his people, their conduct provoked his refentment, and dewrmined him to revenge the infult. With this view he immediately raifod a fmall army of from 3 to 4,000 men, the command of which he gave to an able and active Magifrate, announcing, by that appointment, that he fent them, not to fubdue a refpecable enemy, but to punifh an affemblage of plunderers and affafins. Having compleated the difficult paffage of the defart, and having gained the firft afcent of the mountains, they proceeded without oppofition, till at length the natives, who waited in ambufh, rufhed upon them, and with the bows and arrows, and lances, with which they were armed, began a furious affault: but the inflant that the foremoft of the foldiers had given their fire, the mountaineers, more alarmed at the dreadful founds which they heard, and at the imagined lightning which they faw, than ternified with the flaughter that was made, threw down their arms, and flying with great precipitation, abandoned, to the mercy of the victors, their houfes and their helplefs inhabitants. The next morning, a deputation, from the natives, of their principal people arrived at the camp, with humble intreaties that their wives and children might be fpared, and an offer, on that condition, to fubmit to any terms which the Alcaid fhould defire to impofe. The Alcaid accordingly demanded, and received, as hoftages for their future conduct, twenty of their principal people, with whom, and with all the plunder which the country afforded, he returned in triumph to Fezzan. There the King entertained them with kindnefs, and under a promife that their nation fhould acknowledge him as their Sovereign, and fhould annually pay to him a tribute of twenty camel loads of fenna, made them valuable prefents; and with ftrong impreffions on their minds, of the generous treatment which they had received, fent them back to Tibefti.

From that period no attempt to moleft his caravans has been made by the mountaineers; and though they neither acknowledge the King of Fezzan for their Sovereign, nor pay him any tribute, yet they bring the whole of their fenna to Mourzouk for fale, where it is purchafed to great advantage by the King, and is afterwards fold, on his account, at the market of Tripoli.

An occafional vifit to the Court of Fezzan is paid by their Chief, who is always received with great hofpitality, and after a refidence of a few weeks, is difmiffed, with a prefent of a long robe.

The vales of Tibefti are fertile in corn, and pafturage for cattle, of which they have numerous herds, and are particularly celebrated for their breed of camels, which are efteemed the beft in Africa. For this fertility they are indebted to the water of the innumerable fprings that amply compenfate for the want of rain, which feldom, if ever, falls within the limits of Tibefti.

Huts of the fimpleft conftruction (for they are formed of ftakes Q driven driven into the ground in a circular arrangement, and covered with the branches of trees and brufhwood intermixed) compofe the dwellings of the people.

In return for the fenna and the camels which they fell in Fezzan, they bring back coral, alhaiks, or barakans, Imperial dollars, and brafs, from the two laft of which articles they manufacture the rings and bracelets which are worn by their women.

Among the natives of Tibefti different religions are profeffed; for fome of them are Mahometans, and others continue attached to their antient fyftem of Idolatry.

CHAPTER V.

> Mode of Travelling in Africa.

THE mode of travelling in Africa is fo connected with the commerce, and therefore with the manners of its principal nations, that without fome knowledge of the former, a defcription of the two latter cannot be clearly underftood.

In that divifion of Africa which lies to the North of the The Shereef Niger, the feafon for travelling begins with the month of October, and terminates with the month of March. During this period, the temperature of the air, though ftrongly affected by the degree of latitude, the elevation of the land, the diftance of the fea, and the direction of the wind, is comparatively cool;
Q 2 the

Een Alli.

Lucas, and in fome places, as in the neighbourhood of Mount Atlas, and on the Coafts of the Mediterranean, occafionally exhibits the phænomena of an European Winter. At Tripoli, the Thermometer is fometimes feen at the 40 th degree of Farenheit's fcale, and on the 31 ff of December, in the year 1788 , was obferved, at nine in the morning, to have fallen within four degrees of the freezing point; a coldnefs that was followed by a light fhower of fnow.

In all countries, the animals which Nature and the attention of man have provided for the conveyance of the Traveller, and for the tranfit of his merchandize, are fuited to the character of the foil, and to the fmoothnefs or inequality of its furface. Of the foil of Africa, to the North of the Niger, the prevailing character is fand; and though in the neighbourhood of rivers, and in all thofe diftriets which receive from the adjacent mountains, the advantage of numerous fprings, the fand is blended with a vegetable mould, yet the ground, in general, is remarkably foft and dry. In general, too, the furface of the land, though in fome places broken by naked rocks, and fwelling, in others, to mountains mountains of confiderable magnitude, may be regarded as comparatively level.

To fuch a country the camel is peculiarly fuited; for his broad and tender foot, which flides on a wet furface, and is injured by the refiftance of ftones, is obferved to tread with perfect fecurity and eafe on the dry and yielding fand: and while, from the fame circumftances in its ftructure, his hoof is incapable of faftening, with any ftrength, on the ground of a fteep afcent, and furnifhes, in a fhelving declivity, no folid or fufficient fupport, his movement on a fmooth and level furface is fingularly firm and fafe.

So remarkably exemplified in Africa is that rule in the occonomy of Nature which fuits the beaft of burthen to the land which it inhabits, that in the country which lies to the South- Inhammeis Weft of the Niger, where the furface is mountainous, and the ground is as ftony in fome places, as it is wet and muddy in others, no camels are found. Their place is fupplied by fmall horfes, affes, and mules.

The proper burthen for a camel varies with its ftrength, which is very different in different fpecies of the animal. In the dominions minions of Tripoli, a common load is from three to four hundred weight ; and the medium expence of the conveyance for each hundred appears to be one farthing per mile.

The ufual rate of travelling is three miles in the hour, and the number of hours that are actually employed on the rout, exclufive of thofe which are allotted to refrefhment, is feldom more than feven or eight in a day. Of the number of days which are confumed on a long journey, many are devoted to the purpofe of occafional trade, to that of recruiting the frength of the camels, and to that of procuring additional fores of provifions and of water; for in all fuch places as are able to furnifh a fup: ply of provifions (which are generally places of confiderable population, and therefore of fome traffic) the ftay of the caravan is feldom lefs than two days, and is often prolonged to more.

The general food of the camels is fuch only as their nightly
Ben Alli. pafture affords; and is often confined to the hard and thorny fhrubs of the Defart, where a fullen vegetation is created by the rains of the Winter, and upheld by the dews that defcend in copious abundance through all the remainder of the year.

Of the drivers and fervants of the caravan, the cuftomary food confifts of the milk of the camel, with a few dates, together Imbammed. with the meal of barley or of Indian corn, which is fometimes feafoned with oil, while the Merchant fuperadds, for his own ufe, the dried flefh of the camel, or of fheep, and concludes his repaft with coffee.

Water is drawn from the wells in leather buckets, that form Imbanmed : a part of the travelling equipage of the caravan, and is carried in ${\underset{\text { and }}{\text { and }} \text { Ali. }}_{\substack{\text { and }}}$ the fkins of goats, through which, however, though tarred both within and without, it is often exhaled by the heat of the noonday fun.

A particular mode of eafy conveyance is provided for the Ben Aliz, women and children, and for perfons oppreffed with infirmity or illnefs: fix or eight camels are yoked together in a row, and a number of tent poles are placed in parallel lines upon their backs : thefe are covered with carpets, and bags of corn are fuperadded to bring the floor to a level, as well as to foften the harfhnefs of the camel's movement; other carpets are then fpread, and the traveller fits or lies down, with as much convenience as if he refted on a couch.

The Defart (a term of the fame meaning with its Arabic mame of Zahara) may be faid, like the ocean, to connect the very nations which it feems to feparate ; for, in comparifon with the woods and moraffes of America, it furnifhes the Merchant with an eafy and convenient road.

A fandy heath of various levels, in fome places naked and Ben Ali. bare, but much more frequently covered with an odoriferous plant, which the Arabs call the Shé, and which, though far fuperior in fragrance, has at leaft a remote refemblance to the wild thyme of Europe, conflitutes the general appearance of the Defart. The exceptions, however, are interefting and important: for befides the diverfity that arifes from the different flrubs, which are often fcantily intermixed with the Shé, and of which the thorny plant that forms the harfh food of the camel appears to be the moft common, an effential variation is furnifhed by the comparative fertility of fome particular diftricts, and by the total barrennefs of others.

Imhammed and
Ben Alli.

In fome portions of the general wildernefs, thoufands of fheep, and goats, and cows, are feen to pafture ; while in others nothing is prefented to the eye but defolate hills of fhifting fand.

To the laft of thefe the name of Defarts wittout Water is emphatically given; a name that conveys to an Arab ear the Imhammed. fearful idea of an intenfe and fuffocating heat, of the total abfence of vegetable life, and of the hazard of a dreadful death. For though the movement of the fhifting fands is not fo rapid as to endanger the fafety of the caravan, yet as the fcorching heat of the fun-beams, confined and reflected by the hills of fand, hourly diminifhes the ftore of water, and as the breadth of feveral of thofe defarts is that of a ten days journey, the hazard of perifhing with thirft is fometimes fatally experienced.

All means of afcertaining the rout by land-marks, the ufual Imammed. guides in other parts of the wildernefs, are here deftroyed by the varying forms and fhifting pofition of the hills; but from anxious obfervation and continued practice, the camel-drivers acquire a fufficient knowledge of the bearings of the fun and ftars to direct them in their way.

Such are the expedients by which the difficulties of the Defart are in general overcome: thofe which are prefented by the broad current of the impetuous Niger, though much more eafily, are not fo frequently furmounted.

Of this river, which in Arabic is fometimes called Neel il Imammed, R

Kibeer,

Kibeer, or the Great Nile, and at others, Neel il Abeed, or the Imhammed. and Ben Alli.

Imhammed.

Imhammed。

Inhammed. Nile of the Negros, the rife and termination are unknown, but the courfe is from Eaft to Weft. So great is the rapidity with which it traverfes the Empire of Cafhna, that no veffel can afcend its flream; and fuch is the want of fkill, or fuch the abfence of commercial inducements among the inhabitants of its borders, that even rwith the current, neither veffels nor boats are feen to navigate. In one place, indeed, the Traveller finds accommodations for the paffage of himfelf and of his goods; but even there, though the ferrymen, by the indulgence of the Sultan of Cafhna, are exempted from all taxes, the boat which conveys the merchandize is nothing more than an ill-conftructed raft; for the planks are faftened to the timbers with ropes, and the feams are clofed both within and without, by a plaiter of tough clay, of which a large provifion is always carried on the raft for the purpofe of excluding the ftream wherever its entrance is obferved,

The depth of the river at the place of paffage, which is more than a hundred miles to the South of the City of Cafhna, the capital of the empire of that name, is eftimated at twenty-three or twenty-four feet Englifh.*

Its

* Its depth is from ten to twelve peeks, each of which is twenty-feven inches. The Shereef Imhammed.

Its width is fuch that even at the Ifland of Gongoo, where the ferrymen refide, the found of the loudeft voice from the northern fhore is fcarcely heard; and at Tombuctou, where the name Ben Alli. of Gnewa, or black, is given to the fream, the width is defcribed as being that of the Thames at Weftminfter. In the rainy feafon it fwells above its banks, and not only floods the adjacent lands, but often fweeps before it the cattle and cottages of the fhort-fighted or too confident inhabitants.

That the people who live in the neighbourhood of the Niger fhould refufe to profit by its navigation, may juftly furprife the Traveller ; but much greater is his aftoninmment, when he finds Imbammed that even the food which the bounty of the fream would give, Ben Alli, is ufelefsly offered to their acceptance; for fuch is the want of Akill, or fuch the fettled diflike of the people to this fort of provifion, that the filh with which the river abounds are left in undifturbed poffeffion of its waters.

Having paffed the ftream, the face of the country, and with Imhammed. it the mode of travelling, are changed. High mountains and narrow valleys, extenfive woods and miry roads, fucceed to the vaft plains and fandy foil of the Zahara and its neighbouring kingdoms. Water is no longer refufed or fcantily given to the parched lips of the Traveller; but while the abundance of this refrefhment, and of the vait variety both of vegetable and animal

Imhammed. food that is offered in profufion for his fupport, diminifh the hardhips and remove the principal hazards of his journey, the raging heat of the Torrid Clime increafes as he proceeds. Wet cloths applied to the mouth are fometimes requifite, and efpecially in the woods, to allay, for the purpofe of refpiration, the violence of the burning air ; and the journey, which the fiercenefs of the fun fufpends, is often renewed amidft the dews. and comparative darknefs of the night.

From the want of camels, which are feldom feen to the South of Cafhna, nor even to the Weft, except in higher latitudes, the conveyance of the Merchant and his goods is committed to the mules, and fmall horfes and affes of the country. Of the firft, the ufual burthen is 200lbs. of the fecond, $1501 b s$. and of the laft, roolbs.

Travelling through all this part of Africa is confidered as fo fecure, that the Shereef Imhammed, with the utmoft chearfulnefs and confidence of fafety, propofed to accompany and con_ duct Mr. Lucas, by the way of Fezzan and Cafhna, acrofs the Niger, to Affenté, which borders on the Coaft of the Chriftians.

CHAPTER

CHAPTER VI.

General Remarks on the Empires of Bornou and Ca/bna.---Rout from Mourzouk to Bornou---Climate of Bornou---Complexion, Drefs, and Food of the Inbabitants--Their Mode of Building--Their Language----Government---Military Force---Manners--and Trade.

To the South of the kingdom of Fezzan, in that vaft region which fpreads itfelf from the river of the Antelopes weftward for $\mathbf{1} 200$ miles, and includes a confiderable part of the Niger's courfe, two great empires, thofe of Bornou and thofe of Cafhna, are eftablifhed.

The circumftances of foil and climate, and thofe alfo which conflitute political character, are nearly the fame in both: for their prevailing winds are the fame ; their rains, which are periodical in each, though much more profufe in Bornou, begin at the fame feafon; the fame grains are cultivated ; the fame fruits (generally fpeaking) are produced; and except that no camels are bred to the weftward of the City of Cafhna, the capital of the empire, the fame animals are reared. In both, the complexion of the inhabitants is black ; their mode of building too is fimilar, and their manners, though in fome refpects more civilized in Bornou, have a general refemblance.

Each of the two empires is formed by the fubjection of different tribes or nations to the dominion of one ruling people. The nature of the Government, and the laws which regulate its fucceffion, are the fame in both. In both, the ruling people are Mahometans; in both, the dependent nations are compofed of converts to the Muffelman faith, and of adherents to the antient worfhip; and though at prefent their languages are different, the conquerors in both had probably the fame original.

Of thefe empires, Cafhna, till of late, was efteemed the firft in power ; but though a thoufand villages and towns are ftill included included in her vaft domains, the is now confidered as much inferior to Bornou.
ROUT FROM MOURZOUK TO BORNOU.

FROM Mourzouk in Fezzan to Bornou, the capital of the empire from which it takes its name, the Fezzanners, whofe commercial firit no diftance can difcourage, are conducted by a rout of more than a thoufand miles. Temmiffa, the firft town at which they arrive, and the laft which they fee in Fezzan, they reach on the feventh day; and in three days more they enter the territories of Bornou. Several villages, inhabited by Blacks, whofe perfons, their waifts excepted, are entirely naked, whofe meagre limbs and famifhed looks announce their extreme of mifery, and whofe idolatrous religion neither excites the refentment nor reftrains the charity of the benevolent Fezzanners, mark the northern frontier of the empire.

On the day following their departure from thefe melancholy hamlets, they begin the afcent of a hilly uninhabited defart of fand, where a few bufhes of penurious vegetation point out the fucceffive fucceffive wells that are found in thefe barren heights, and diminifh the fatigues of a three days paffage. At the clofe of the fourth day they enter a plain that is inhabited by Mahometans, where, in addition to a plentiful fupply of excellent water, they are cheared with the fight of date trees, and of Indian corn.

From this plain, which lies to the Weft of the Defart of Tibefti, and the end of which they reach on the fecond day, a part of the Tibefti mountains take their rife. Thefe vaft hills, the range of which is very extenfive, are varioufly peopled; but fuch of them as are croffed on the rout from Fezzan to the City of Bornou, are inhabited by a mixture of Muffelmen and Idolaters, who employ themfelves in breeding camels and affes, and other cattle, particularly horfes of a fmall fize.

Exclufively of the two days that are requifite for the paffage of the mountains, an allowance of twice that time is generally given to refrefhment and repofe; foon after which a fertile and beautiful country, as richly diverfified as numeroufly peopled, opens to their view. Its inhabitants are herdfmen, and with the exception of a few Pagans who are intermixed among them, are Muffelmen in their faith. Their dwellings are in tents which are compofed of hides, and their wealth confifts in the multitude of their cows and fheep.

Four days are employed in croffing thefe fortunate diftricts: the fixth conducts the caravan to the entrance' of the vaft and burning Defart of Bilma. Surrounded by this dreary folitude, the Traveller fees with a dejected eye the dead bodies of the birds that the violence of the wind has brought from happier regions; and as he ruminates on the fearful length of his remaining paffage, liftens with horror to the voice of the driving blaft, the only found that interrupts the awful repofe of the Defart.

On the eleventh day from their entrance on thefe fcorching fands, the caravan arrives in the fertile plains that encompafs the Town of Domboo, the approach to which is enlivened by the frequent appearance of the majeftic Oftrich, and of the gay but fearful Antelope.

From thence, in about five days, they reach the City of Kánem, the capital of an extenfive and fertile province, of which it bears the name, and in which the inhabitants, who are compofed of Muffelmen and Pagans, breed multicudics of catte, and raife innumerable horfes for the fervice of the King.

A journey of ten days more concludes their labour, and brings them to the imperial City of Bornou. *

Bornou,

* The rout wobich Ben Alli purfued from Fozzan to Bornou is not difinity defcribed.

His relation is, that on the 26tb day from the time of bis leaving Fezzan, be arrived at a place wobich in Arabic is called We'ddan, or the Rivers, for We'ddan is the plural of Wed wobich jegnifes a river.

The firft part of the country tbrougb which be pafed is reprefented as a fandy Defart, in which the Shé (a plant that refembles the Wild Tbyme of England) and a ferw bufbes of forubs and foort trees are thinly fiattered, and wells of water are extremely rare. Wandering Arabs, of the powerful but bofpitable Tribes of Booaifh and Dubafin, appear to be its only inkabitants; and W'eddan itfelf is faid to contain but 130 boufes, wobich are built of earth and fand; and to furnibh no articles of trade but dates and falt; yet the country around it is called prolific: the rice grounds are defcribed as numerous, and multitudes of Sheep and goats, of camels and of horfes, fwell the lift of its poffefions.

He reprefents the Dubafin Arabs, as Merchants journeying to Bornou, wobo carried with them for fale an afortment of goods; among which be enumerates zwheat, barley, dates, falt, tobacco, and albaiks: and be obferves, that be purchafed from the Cbief the permifion of accompanying the Tribe, and the confequent affurance of a fafe paflage to Bornou.

From Wéddan, by forced marches, they arrived in twenty days at Bornou. A defart of fand, in fome places interrupted by woods, and occafionally watered with rivulets of a firong mineral tafte, confitutes the general defcription of the country. But as be entered Bornou, the name which the natives give to the country, is diftinguifhed in Arabic by the appellation of Bernou or Bernoa, a word that fignifits the land of Noah, for the Arabs conceive that, on the firft retiring of the deluge, its mountains received the Ark.

The Climate, as may naturally be expected in a kingdom which feems to be bounded by the 16 th and the 26 th parallels S 2 of the kingdom of the Bornoos, the limit of which be reprefents as Seven days diftant from the capital, be paffed through feveral poor villages of Blacks, who live upon the charity of Travellers; for though there be no regular marked road, yet the caravans always tok: the fame rout, and pafs by thofe villages botb in going and returning.

Ben Alli feems to bave travelled from Mourzouk to Bornou by a different yout fron that which is ufually taken by the Merchants of Fezzan: nor can it be fuppofed, that the independent and powerful Arabs with whom be journeyed, would either obicin, or folicit the permifion of the Sovereign of Fezzan to pafs in fo large a body tbrought bis fmall and unguarded dominions. And though the correfponding accounts that are given in the narratives of the Shereef and of BEN Alli, of fome villages of miferable Blacks, may fuggeft an idea that the two roads interfected each other on the frontier of Bornou, yet as on that Suppofition, the different times within which the feveral parts of the two journeys were refpectively performed cannot be eafily reconciled, there is reafon to believe that the villages defcribed by Ben Alli, though peopled by fimilar inbabitants, may not be the fame with thofe which attracted the compaffionate notice of the Shereef.
of latitude, is characterized by exceffive, though not by uniform heat. Two feafons, the one commencing foon after the middle of April, the other at the fame period of October, may be faid to divide the year. The firf is introduced by violent winds that bring with them, from the South Eaft and South, an intenfe heat, with a deluge of fultry rain, and fuch tempefts of thunder and lightning as deftroy multitudes of the cattle, and many of the people. During the rainy period (the continuance of which is from three to nine fucceffive days, with fhort intervals from the occafional changes of the wind to the North or Weft) the inhabitants confine themfelves clofely to their dwellings ; but the reft of the firft feafon, however fultry and however occafionally wet, is not incompatible with the neceffary labours of the hufbandman and the fhepherd.

At the commencement of the fecond feafon in the latter part of October, the ardent heat fubfides; the air becomes foft and mild; the weather continues perfectly ferene; and as the year declines, an unwelcome coolnefs precedes the rifing of the fun.

The inhabitants, though confifting of fuch a multitude of nations that thirty languages are faid to be fpoken in the empire, are alike in their Complexion, which is entirely black, but are not of the Negro caft.

- In a climate fo warm, the chief recommendations of Drefs are decency and ornament: among the pooreft, therefore, by whom the firft only is regarded, a kind of girdle for the waift is fometimes the only covering; but in general a turban, confifting, as in Barbary, of a red woollen cap, furrounded by folds of cotton, together with a loofe robe of coloured cotton of a coarfer kind, are alfo worn.*

The Grain that conflitutes the principal object of culture in Bornou is Indian corn, of two different kinds, which are diftinguifhed in the country by the names of the gaffob, and the gamphúly.

The

[^5]The gafób, which in its gencral flape refembles the common reed, is of two fpecies; the firft grows with a long falk that bears an ear, which in length is from cight to twelve inches, and contains, in little hufks or cavities, from three to five hundredgrains, of the fize of fmall peafe. The fecondfpecies, which is common in Tripoli, differs no otherwife from the firt than in the fhorter fize of the ear.

The gamphúly is diftinguirhed from the gaffob, by the bulk of the ftalk, for that of the gamphály is much thicker, by the number of its ears, for it has feveral on the fame reed, and by the fize of the grain, which is confiderably larger. This kind of corn is frequently feen in Spain, and is there called Maize.

Wheat and barley are not raifed in Bornou; but the horfebean of Europe and the common kidney-bean are cultivated with great affiduity, as they are ufed for food, both by the flaves and by the cattle,*

In

* The country in the neighbourhood of the City of Bornou is fertile in Indian corn and rice. Of barley and wheat the quantity raifed is fmall. A fpecies of bean, which refembles the horfe-bean of Europe, though larger, and of a darker hue, is a much more common produce. Gum-trees are thinly feattered. Cotton, hemp, and indigo, are alfo among the various produce of its foil.

In the culture of thefe different grains, the hoe alone is employed, as the ufe of the plough is ftill unknown to the people. The women divide with the men the labours of their hufbandry; for while the latter, with their hoes, open the ground, and form the trenches in ftraight lines parallel to each other, the women follow and throw in the feed: nor is this the only part which they take in the bufinefs of the field; for to them, as foon as the weeds begin to rife on the ridges of the lines in which the grain is fowed, the hoe is conftantly transferred.

The fowing feafon commences at the end of the periodical rains of April; and fuch in that climate is the rapid vegetation, that on the 9th of July the gaffob is reaped; but the gamphíly, a grain of flower growth, is feldom cut till the month of Auguft or September.

Such are the feveral fpecies of corn that, among the people of Bornou, fupply the place of the wheat, the barley, and the oats of Europe. Two fpecies of roots are alfo ufed as wholefome and fubftantial food : the one, which is called the Dondoo, produces a low plant, with branches that fpread four or five feet upon the ground, and leaves that refemble thofe of the gardenbean. At the end of five months, from the time of its being planted, planted, the leares fall off, and the root is taken from the ground, and being cut into fmall pieces, is dried in the fun, in which fiate it may be kept for two years. Its further preparation confifts in reducing it to a fine powder, and mixing it with palm oil till it affumes the confiftency of pafte.
"The other root is that of a tree, of which the name had efcaped the Shereef's recollection: boiling is the only procefs that is requifite in preparing it for ufe.

The fame character of fufficiency which marks the catalogue of the different kinds of grain in Bornou, belongs alfo to the lift of its various Fruits; for though neither olives nor oranges are feen in the empire, and even figs are rare, and though the apples and plumbs of its growth deferve no commendation, and the dates are as indifferent as they are fcarce, yet grapes, and apricots, and pomegranates, together with lemons and limes, and the two fpecies of melons, the water and the mukk, are produced in large abundance.* But one of the mof valuable of [^6]of its vegetable ftores, is a tree which is called Kedéynah, that in form and height refembles the olive, is like the lemon in its leaf, and bears a nut, of which the kernel and the fhell are both in great eftimation, the firft as a fruit, the laft on account of the oil which it furnifhes when bruifed, and which fupplies the lamps of the people of Bornou with a fubftitute for the oil of olives.

To this competent provifion of fuch vegetables as are requifite to the fupport, or grateful to the appetite of man, mult be added a much more ample and more varied fupply, of Animal Food. Innumerable flocks of fheep, and herds of goats and cows, (for there are no oxen) together with multitudes of horfes, buffaloes, and camels, (the flefh of which is in high eftimation) cover the vales or pafture on the mountains of Bornou. *

The common, though not the Guinea fowl is alfo reared by the inhabitants ; and their hives of bees are fo extremely numeT rous [^7]rous, that the wax is often thrown away as an article of no value in the market.

Their game confifts of the Huaddee, and other fpecies of antelopes, of the partridge, the wild duck, and the oftrich, the flefh of which they prize above every other.

Their other wild animals are the lion, the leopard, the civet cat, the fmall wolf, the fox, the wild dog, that hunts the antelope ; the elephant, which is not common, and of which they make no ufe ; the crocodile, the hippopotamus, which is often killed on the banks of the river that runs from the Neel Shem, (the Nile of Egypt) to the Defart of Bilma; and a large and fingular animal, which is diftinguifhed by the name of Zarapah, and which is defcribed as refembling the camel in its head and body, as having a long and flender neck like the oftrich, as being much taller at the fhoulders than the haunches, and as defended by fo tough a fkin, as to furnifh the natives with fhields that no arrow or javelin can pierce. \%

Bornou,

* Giraffa is the name by which the camelopardalis is called in the old zoological books.-The defcription bere inferted, Seems to bave arijen from a blended recollection of that animal, and of the bippopotamus, woloofe bide is extremely tough.

Bornou, like other countries that approach the Equinoctial, is much infefted with different kinds of dangerous or difgufting reptiles, efpecially fnakes and fcorpions, centipedes and toads.

Of its beafs of burtben the variety is as ample as the numbers are abundant; for the camel, the horfe, the afs, and the mule, are common in the empire.

The dog, with which the inhabitants purfue their game, appears to be their only domefic animal.

In the mountains of Tibefti, and perhaps in other parts of the empire, the herdfmen, probably for the fake of a more eafy change of pafture, prefer a refidence in tents to flationary dwellings; and thofe, it feems, are not manufactured, like the tents of the Zahara, from the camel's hair; but are compofed of the hides of cows, a more durable and impervious covering

Through all the empire of Bornou the fame mode of building, and with the difference of a greater or a fmaller fcale, the fame form in the plan of the houfes univerfally prevails.---Four walls, inclofing a fquare, are erected ; within thofe walls, and parallel to them, four other walls are alfo built: the ground between T 2 the the walls is then divided into different apartments, and is covered with a roof. Thus the fpace within the interior wall's determines the fize of the court ; the fpace between the walls determines the width of the apartments ; and the height of the walls determines the height of the rooms. In a large houfe the rooms are each about twenty feet in length, eleven feet in height, and as many in width.

On the outfide of the houfe, a fecond fquare or large yard, furrounded by a wall, is afually provided for the inclofure and protection of the cattle..*

Such is the general plan of a Bornou houfe. For the conftruction of the walls the following method is conftantly purfued: a trench for the foundation being made, is filled with dry and folid materials rammed in with force, and levelled; on thefe a layer of tempered mud or clay is placed; and in this fubftitute for mortar a fuitable number of ftones are regularly fixed. Thus: with alternate layers of clay and ftones the wall proceeds; but as foon as it has reached the height of fix or feven feet, the workmen fufpend its progrefs for a week, that it may have time to fettle, and become compact; for which purpofe they water it every day.

[^8]Ben Allif

When the walls are finifhed they are neatly plaiftered, both within and without, with clay or mud, tempered with fand; for the country furnifhes no lime.

The roofs are formed of branches of the palm tree, intermixed with brufhwood; and are fo conftructed as at firft to be waterproof; but fuch is the violence of the wind and rain, that the end of the fecond year is the utmoft period of their brief duration. *

Much lefs attention is given to the furniture than is beftowed on the ftructure of the houfes; for the catalogue of the utenfils is extremely

* The walls of the greateft part of the houfes are built of a compofition of earth and fand, and are often wafhed down by the heavy rains; but others are formed of the more durable materials of ftones and bricks.

The roofs are compofed of the branches of trees, which are covered with layers of earth, and the whole building is white-wafhed with a fpecies of chalk.
Ben Alli,
extremely fhort. Among the lower claffes of the inhabitants it confifts of the mats covered with a fheep-fkin, upon which they fleep; of an earthen pot; of a pan of the fame materials; of two or three wooden difhes, a couple of wooden bowls, an old carpet, a lamp for oil, and perhaps a copper kettle.

Perfons of a fuperior rank are alfo poffeffed of leathern cuthions, that are ftuffed with wool ; of feveral brafs and copper utenfils, of a handfome carpet, and of a fort of candlefticks; for inftead of the vegetable oil which is ufed by the common people, they employ the light of candles manufactured from their bees wax and the tallow of their fheep.

Bornou is fituated at the diftance of a day's journey from a river which is called Wed-el-Gazel, from the multitude of antelopes that feed upon its banks, and which is loft in the deep and fandy waftes of the vaft Defart of Bilma.\%

From the fymmetry of the houfes, and the general refemblance which they bear to each other, a regular arrangement of ftreets

[^9]Ben Alli.
ftreets might, with the utmoft eafe, have been given to their towns. In Bornou, however, a different fyftem has prevailed; for even in the capital, the houfes, ftraggling wide of each other, are placed without method or rule; and the obvious propriety of giving to the principal mofque, a central fituation, exhibits the only proof of attention to general convenience.*

The King's palace, furrounded by high walls, and forming a kind of citadel, is built, perhaps with a view to fecurity, in a corner of the town. $\dagger$

Markets for the fale of provifions are opened within the city; but for other articles, a weekly market, as in Barbary, is held without the walls.

The
> * Bornoo, though a town of greater extent than Tripoli, confifts of a multitude of houfes, fo irregularly placed that the faces between them cannot be called ftreets. it is furnifhed with mofques, which are conftructed of brick and of earth; and with fchools, in which the Koran is taught, as in the principal towns of Barbary.
Ben Alli.

4 In time of peace the Sultan always refides in the capital.

In general, the towns have no other defence than that which the courage of the inhabitants affords: but the capital is furrounded by a wall of fourteen feet in height, the foundations of which are from eight to ten feet deep, and which feems to be built with confiderable ftrength. To this defence is given the additional fecurity of a ditch, which encompaffes the whole; and care is taken, that at fun-fet the feven gates which form the communication with the country fhall be fhut.*

The great population of Bornou is defcribed by the indefinite and metaphorical expreffion of a countlefs multitude.

[^10]In Fezzan the price of all things is meafured by grains of gold; and where the value is too fmall to be eafily paid in fo coftly a metal, the inhabitants have recourfe to corn, as a common medium of exchange. But in Bornou, as in Europe, the aid of inferior metals is employed, and copper and brafs (which feem to be melted together, and to be mixed with other materials) are formed into pieces of different weights, from an ounce to a pound, and conftitute the current ípecies of the empire.*

Dominions fo extenfive as thofe of Bornou have feldom the advantage of one uniform language; but an inftance of fo many different tongues, within the limits of one empire, as are fpoken in that kingdom, and its dependencies, has ftill lefs frequently occurred, for they are faid to be more than thirty in number.

Of the language, however, which is current in the capital, U and [^11]and which feems to be confidered as the proper language* of Bornou, the following fpecimen is given by the Shereef.

| One | fred | Lakka | Eight | - | Tallore |
| :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: |
| Two |  | Endee | Nine |  | L'ilkar |
| Three |  | Niefkoo | Ten |  | Meiko |
| Four |  | Dekoo | Eleven |  | Meiko Lakka |
| Five |  | Okoo | Twelve |  | Meiko Endee |
| Six |  | Arafkoo | Thirteen |  | Meiko Nie/koo |
| Seven |  | Hukkoo | Fourteen |  | Meiko Dekoo. |

Two different Religions divide the fentiments, without difturbing the peace of the kingdom.

The ruling people profefs the Mahometan faith; $\dot{\gamma}$ and though the [^12]7 The Sultan and his fubjects are Muffelmen.

the antient Paganifm of the dependent nations does not appear to fubject them to any inconvenience, a confiderable part are converts to the doctrines of the Prophet.

An elective monarchy conftitutes the Government of Bornou,* and like the fimilar fyftem of Cafhna, endangers the happinefs, while it acknowledges the power of the people. On the death of the Sovereign, the privilege of chufing among his fons, without regard to priority of birth, a fucceffor to his throne, is conferred by the nation on three of the moft diftinguifhed men, whofe age and character for wifdom, are denoted by their title of Elders; and whofe conduct in the State has invefted them with the public efteem. Bound by no other rule as to their judgment or reftraint, as to their will, than that which the expreffed or implied inftruction of electing the moft worthy may form, they retire to the appointed place of their fecret deliberation, the avenues to which are carefully guarded by the people: and while the contending fuggeftions of private intereft, or a

$$
\mathrm{U}_{2}
$$

fenfe

[^13]fenfe of the real difficulty of chufing where judgment may eafily err, and error may be fatal to the State, keeps them in fufpence, the Princes are clofely confined in feparate chambers of the Palace. Their choice being made, they proceed to the apartment of the Sovereign elect, and conduct him, in filence, to the gloomy place in which the unburied corpfe of his father, that cannot be interred till this awful ceremony is paffed, awaits his arsival. There, the Elders point out to him the feveral virtues and the feveraldefects which marked the character of his departed parent; and they alfo forcibly defcribe, with juft panegyric, or fevere condemnation, the feveral meafures which raifed or depreffed the glory of his reign. "You fee before you the end " of your mortal career; the eternal, which fucceeds to it, will " be miferable or happy in proportion as your reign thall have " proved a curfe or a bleffing to your people."

From this dread fcene of terrible inftruction, the new Sovereign, amidft the loud acclamations of the people, is conducted back to the Palace, and is there invefted by the electors with all the flaves, and with two-thirds of all the lands and cattle of his father ; the remaining third being always detained as a provifion for the other children of the deceafed Monarch. No fooner is the Sovereign invefted with the enfigns of Royalty, than fuch fuch of his brothers as have reached the age of manhood proftrate themfelves at his feet, and in rifing prefs his hands to their lips---the two ceremonies that conflitute the declaration of allegiance.

If any doubt of their fincerity fuggefts itfelf to the King or to the Elders, death or perpetual imprifonment removes the fear; but if no fufpicion arifes, an eftablifhment of lands and cattle from the poffeffions of their father, together with prefents of flaves from the reigning monarch, are liberally beftowed upon them.

Often, however, the moft popular, or the moft ambitious of the rejected Princes, covering his defigns with clofe diffimulation, and the zeal of feeming attachment, creates a powerful party ; and affured of Foreign aid, prepares, in fecret, the means of fuccefsful revolt. But, flained with fuch kindred blood, the fceptre of the vietorious Rebel is not laftingly fecure---one revolution invites and facilitates another; and till the flaughter of the field, the fword of the executioner, or the knife of the affarfin has left him without a brother, the throne of the Sovereign is feldom firmly eftablifhed.

Such, in the Mahometan empires of Bornou and of Caflna, is the rule of fucceffion to the monarchy ; but the Pagan kingdoms adjoining, with obvioufly lefs wifdom, permit the feveral fons of the late Sovereign, attended by their refpective partizans, to offer themfelves, in perfon, to the choice of the electors, and be actually prefent at the decifion; an imprudence that often brings with it the interference of other States, and unites the different calamities of foreign and inteftine war.

Thofe of the Royal Children of Bornou who are too young to take their fhare in the referved part of their deceafed father's poffeffions, are educated in the Palace till the age of maturity arrives; at which time their refpective portions of lands and cattle are affigned them.

To the four lawful wives of the late Sovereign, a feparate houfe, with a fuitable eftablifhment, is granted by the reigning Monarch ; and fuch of his numerous concubines as were not flaves, are at liberty to return to their feveral friends; and, together with leave to retain their cloaths, and all their ornaments, which are often valuable, have free permiffion to marry.

In the empire of Bornou, as in all the Mahometan States, the adminiftration of the provinces is committed to Governors, appointed appointed by the Crown; and the expences of the Sovereign are partly defrayed by his hereditary lands, and partly by taxes levied on the people.

The prefent Sultan, whofe name is Alli, is a man of an unoftentatious plain appearance; for he feldom wears any other drefs than the common blue fhirt of cotton or of filk, and the filk or mullin turban, which form the ufual drefs of the country. Such, however, is the magnificence of his feraglio, that the ladies who inhabit it are faid to be five hundred in number; and he himfelf is defcribed as the reputed father of three hundred and fifty children, of whom three hundred are males; a difproportion which naturally fuggefts the idea that the mother, preferring to the gratification of natural affection, the joy of feeing herfelf the fuppofed parent of a future candidate for the empire, fometimes exchanges her female child for the male offfpring of a ftranger.

Equally fplendid in his ftables, he is faid to have 500 horfes for his own ufe, and for that of the numerous fervants of his houfehold.

In many of the neighbouring kingdoms, the Monarch himfelf is the executioner of thofe crimimals on whom his own voice has pronounced the fentence of death ; but the Sultan of Bornou, too polifhed, or too humane, to pollute his hands with the blood of his fubjects, commits the care of the execution to the Cadi, who directs his flaves to ftrike off the head of the prifoner.

The Military Force of the Sultan of Bornou confifts in the multitude of his horfemen ; for his foot foldiers are few in number, and are fcarcely confidered as contributing to the ftrength of the battle.* The fabre, the lance, the pike, and the bow, conititute their weapons of offence; and a fhield of hides compofes their defenfive armour. Fire-arms, though not entirely unknown to them, for thofe with which the Merchants of Fezzan occafionally travel, are fufficient to give them an idea of their importance and decifive effect, are neither ufed nor pofo feffed by the people of Bornou.

When the Sovereign prepares for war, and levies an army for the [^14]the purpofe, he is faid to have a cuftom, (the refult of idle vanity or of politic oftentation) of directing a date tree to be placed as a threfhold to one of the gates of his capital, and of commanding his horfemen to enter the town one by one, that the parting of the tree in the middle, when worn through by the trampling of the horfes, may enable him to judge of the fufficiency of their numbers, and operate as a fignal that his levy is compleat.

In their Manners, the people of Bornou are fingularly courteous and humane. They will not pafs a ftranger on the road till they have ftopped to falute him : the moft violent of their quarrels are only contefts of words; and thougli a part of the bufinefs of their hufbandry is affigned to the women, yet, as their employment is confined to that of dropping the feed in the furrows, and of removing the weeds with a hoe, it has made more of the amufement of occafional occupation, than of the harfhnefs of continued labour.

Paffionately attached to the tumultuous gratifications of play, yet unacquainted with any game but drafts, they often fit down on the ground, and forming holes to anfwer the purpofe of fquares, fupply the place of men with dates, or the meaner fubX ftitute flitute of ftones, or of camel's dung. On their fkill in the management of thefe rude initruments of the game, they ftake their gold duft, their brafs money, and even their very cloaths; and as the bye-ftanders on thefe occafions conftantly obtrude their advice, and fometimes make the moves for the perfon whofe fuccefs they wifh, their play is ufually accompanied by that conflict of abufe, and vehemence of fcolding, which mark and terminate the fharpeft of their quarrels.

Such is the amufement of the lower claffes of the people; thofe of a fuperior rank are devoted to the more difficult and more interefting game of chefs, in which they are eminently killed.

In countries that afford without cultivation, or that give in return for flight exertions of labour, the principal requifites of life, few articles of export are likely to be found. Thofe of the Bornou Empire confift of---

Gold Duft,*
Slaves,
Horfes,

Oftrich Feathers,*
Salt, and Civet.

* At Bornoo I exchanged for gold duft and oftrich feathers the merchandize which I had brought from Tripoli.

By what means the gold duft, that appears to be a principal article of trade, is procured by the inhabitants, whether from mines in the country, or by purchafe from other nations, the Shereef has not explained. But of their mode of obtaining the Slaves, which conflitute another extenfive branch of their commerce, he gives the following account:

South Eaft of Bornou, at the diftance of about twenty days travelling, and feparated from it by feveral fmall defarts, is fituated an extenfive kingdom of the name of Begarmee, the inhabitants of which are rigid Mahometans, and though perfectly black in their complexions, are not of the Negro caft. Beyond this kingdom to the Eaft are feveral tribes of Negros, idolaters in their religion, favage in their manners, and accuftomed, it is faid, to feed on humar flefh. They are called the Kardee, the Serrowah, the Showva, the Battah, and the Mulgui. Thefe narions the Begarmeefe, who fight on horfeback, and are great warriors, annually invade; and when they have taken as many prifoners as the opportunity affords, or their purpofe may require, they drive the captives, like cattle, to Begarmee. It is faid that if any of them, weakened by age, or exhaufted by fatigue, happen to linger in their pace, one of the horfemen feizes on the oldeft, and cutting off his arm, ufes it as a club to drive on the reft.

$$
\mathrm{X}_{2}
$$

From Begarmee they are fent to Bornou, $\uparrow$ where they are fold at a low price; and from thence many of them are conveyed to Fezzan, where they generally embrace the Muffelman faith, and are afterwards exported by the way of Tripoli to different parts of the Levant.

Such is the mode of obtaining the greateft part of the flaves who are annually fold in Bornou; but as feveral of the provinces of the empire are inhabited by Negros, their infurrections, real or pretended, afford to the Sovereign an opportunity of increafing his income by their fale.

A more politic and more effectual mode of aiding his finances is fruitlefsly offered by the falt lakes of the Province of Domboo: for, as the great Empire of Cafhna is entirely deftitute [^15]tute of falt, and none is found in the dominions of the Negros, the fole poffeffion of this article might infure to the King of Bornou a conftant and ample revenue of the beft kind, a revenue collected from the fubjects of Foreign States; but fuch is the prevalence of antient cuftom over the obvious fuggeftions of policy, that the people of Agadez, a Province of the Cafhna Empire, are annually permitted to load their immenfe caravans with the falt of Bornou, and to engrofs the profits of this invaLuable trade. The falt is collected on the fhores of the feveral lakes which produce it, and the only acknowledgement that the Merchants of Agadez give in return for the article, is the trifling price which they pay in brafs and copper (the currency of Bornou) to the neighbouring peafants.

The civet, which forms another article of the export trade of Bornou, and the greateft part of which is fent to the Negro States who inhabit far to the South, is obtained from a fpecies of wild cat that is common in the woods of Bornou and of Cafhna.

This animal is taken alive in a trap prepared for the purpofe, is placed in a cage, and is ftrongly irritated till a copious preparation is produced. Its fweat, and efpecially the moifture that appears upon the tail, is then fcraped off, is preferved in a bladder, and conftitutes the much valued perfume. After a fhort interval the operation is renewed, and is repeated, from time to time, till at the end of twelve or fourteen days the animal dies of the fatigue and continual torment. The quantity obtained from one cat is generally about half an ounce.

Of Manufactures, none for exportation are furnihed by the people of Bornou; but the Shereef remarks that, for their own confumption, they fabricate from the iron ore of their country, though with little dkill, fuch flight tools as their hufbandry requires.*

In

* From the hemp of the country, a coarfe linen is manufactured by the people of Bornoo. Their cotton, which is alfo a native produce, is fpun to a thread of remarkable finenefs, and is then converted to callicoes and muflins of about nine inches in breadth, and of a length which varies from fifteen to twenty yards. Such of thefe cotton manufactures as are enriched with the blue dye of the country, which, from the fuperiority of the indigo, is preferable to that of the Eaft Indies, are valued more highly than filk; yet their only fupply of the latter is that which the Merchants of Barbary convey.

They alfo fabricate a fpecies of carpet, as a covering for their horfes. Tents, from wool and the hair of goats and of camels, are made for the ufe of the army.

The little filver they have is converted by their own artifts into rings.
Ben Alli.

In return for their exports, they receive the following goods:

Copper and Brafs, which are brought to them from Tripoli, by the way of Fezzan, and which, as already mentioned, are ufed as the current fpecies of Bornou;

Imperial Dollars, which are alfo brought to them from Tripoli by the Merchants of Fezzan, and are converted by their own artifts into rings and bracelets for their women;

Red Woollen Caps, which are worn under the turban;
Check Linens,
Light coarfe Woollen Cloths,
Baize,
Barakans,
Small Turkey Carpets,
Plain Mefurata Carpets.

CHAPTER VII.

Rout from Mourzout to Cafbna---Boundaries of the Empire--Its Language, Currency, and Irade.

EQUALLY conneated by their commerce with Cafina and Bornou, the Fezzanners difpatch to the former as woll as to the latter, and always at the fame feafon, an annual caravan. From Mourzouk, their capital, which they leave at the clofe of October, they take their courfe to the South South Weft, and proceed to the Province of Hiatts, the mof barren, and the wort inhabited diftrict of their country.

Five of the fourteen days which are requifte for this part of their rout, are confumed in the paffage of a fandy defart, in which their ufual expedient of covering their goat ikins, both within and without, with a refinous fubftance, prevents but imperfectly the dreaded evaporation of their water.

From the Province of Hiatts they crofs the low mountains of Eyré, which feparate the Kingdom of Fezzan from the vaft Empire of Cafhna ; and leaving to their right the fmall river which flows from thefe hills, and is loft in the deep fands of a neighbouring defart, they enter a wide heath, uninhabited, but not deftitute of water. The fixth day conducts them from this extended folitude to the long defired refrefhments of the Town of Ganatt, where the two next days are devoted to repofe.

From thence, by a march of nineteen days, during fix of which they are immerfed in the heats of a thirfty defart, they pafs on to the Town of Affouda, which offers them equal refrefhments with Ganatt, and equally fufpends their journey.

On leaving Affouda, they traverfe a delightful country, as fertile as it is numeroufly peopled; and while the exhilarating fight of Indian corn and of frequent herds of cattle accompanies and chears their paffage, the eighth day introduces them to the large and populous City of Agadez, the capital of an extenfive province.

Diftinguifhed as the moft commercial of all the towns of Cafhna, and, like Affouda and Ganatt, inhabited by Mahometans alone, Agadez naturally attracts the peculiar attention of the Merchants of Fezzan. Many of them proceed no further ; but the greateft part, committing to their Agents the care of the flaves, cotton, and fenna, which they purchafe in the courfe of a ten days refidence, continue their journey to the South.

In this manner, if the camel's are compleatly loaded, feven and forty days, exclufive of thofe which are allotted to refrefhment and neceffary reft, are employed in travelling from Mourzouk to Agadez.

At the end of three days more, amidft fields that are enriched with the luxuriant growth of Indian corn, and paftures that are covered with multitudes of cows, and with flocks of fheep and goats, the Traveller reaches the fmall Town of Begzam; from which, through a country of herdimen, whofe dwellings are in tents of hides, the fecond day conducts him to the Town of Tegomáh. There, as he furveys the ftoney, uninhabited, defolate hills that form the chearlefs profpect before him, he cafts a regretful eye on thofe verdant fcenes that furrounded him the day before. Employed for two days in the paffage of thefe dreary heights, he defcends on the third to a deep and fcorching fand, from which he emerges at the approach of the fifthevening, and entering a beautiful country, as pleafingly diverffied with the natural bcauties of hills and vales and woods, as with the rich rewards of the hubandman's and the fhepherd's toil, he arrives in feven days more at the City of Cafnna, the capital of the empire of which it bears the name, and the ufual refidence of its powerful Sultan.

The country to which the Geographers of Europe have given the name of Nigritia, is called by the Arabs Soudan, and by the natives Aafnou, two words of fimilar import, that, like the European appellation, exprefs the land of the Blacks, and like that too, are applied to a part only of the region to which their meaning fo obvioufly belongs.---Yet, even in this limited fenfe, the word Soudán is often varioufly employed; for while fome of the Africans reftrict it to the Empire of Cafhna, which is fituated to the North of the Niger, others extend it, with indefinite comprehenfion, to the Negro States on the South of the river, and applying it as a means of expreffing the extended rule and tranfcendant power of the Emperor of Cafhna, call him, with extravagant compliment, the Sultan of all Soudán.

His real fovereignty is bounded, on the North, by the mountains of Eyré, and by one of thofe diftricts of the great Zahara, that furnifh no means of ufeful property or available dominion; on the South, by the Niger ; and on the Eaft, by the Kingdom of Zamphara and the Empire of Bornou. Its weftern limit is not defcribed by the Shereef; nor is any thing faid of the Canital, except that it is fituated to the North of the Niger, at the ciftance of five days journey, and that its buildings refemble thofe of Bornou.

The obfervations which introduced the account of Bornou, have already announced the remarkable fimilarity, as well with refpect to climate, foil, and natural productions, as with regard to the colour, genius, religion, and political inflitutions of the people, that prevails between that powerful State and its fifter Kingdom of Cafhna.

The rains, indeed, are lefs violent than thofe of Bornou. It exclufively furnifhes the Bifhnah, a fpecies of Indian corn that differs from the gamphály, in the blended colours of red and white which diftinguifh its grain. Its monkeys and parrots (animals but feldom feen in Bornou) are numerous, and of various fpecies. The meridian of its capital is confidered as a weftern limit, in that parallel of latitude, to the vegetation of grapes and the breed of camels; for between Caflina and the Atlantic few camels are bred, and no grapes will grow. The manners of the common people are lefs courteous in Cafhna than in Bornou, and their games are lefs expreflive of reflection; for their favourite play confifts in toffing up four fmall fticks, and counting thofe that crofs each other, as fo many points of the number that conftitutes the game. But the circumftances of chief difcrimination between the empires are, thofe of language, currency, and certain articles of commerce.

Of the difference between the Languages of Bornou and of Cafhna, the following fpecimen is given by the Shereef a

| In the Language of Bornou $I$ is expreffed by Lakkah |
| :---: |
| 2 .............. Endee |
| 3.............. Niefkoo |
| 4 .............. Dekoo |
| 5 .............. Okoo |
| 6 .............. Arakkoo |
| 7 ............... Nukkoo |
| 8 .............. Tallóre |
| 9 .............. L'ilkar |
| Io ............... Meikoo |
| If .............. Meiko Lakkah |
| I2 .............. Meiko Endee |
| I3 .............. Meiko Niefkoo |
| I4 ............... Meikoo Dekoo |

> In the Language of Cafhna 1 isexprefedby Deiyah
> 2 .............. Beeyou.
> 3 .............. Okoo
> 4 .............. Foodoo
> 5 .............. Beát
> 6 .............. Sheedah
> 7 .............. Bookai
> 8 .............. Tàkoos
> 9 .............. Tarráh
> Io .............. Goumah
> II ............... Goumah fha Deiyah
> 12 .............. Goumah fina Beeyou
> I3 .............. Goumah fha Okoo
> 14. .............. Goumah fla Foodoo

The Currency of Cafnna, like that of the Negro States to the South of the Niger, is compofed of thore fmall fhells that are known to Europeans and to the Blacks themfelves by the name of Cowries, and to the Arabs by the appellation of Hueddah.--Cardie, which is another term for this ipecies of Negro money, and the fpecific meaning of which the Shereef has neglected to explain, is faid to be given to it by the idolatrous tribes alone; a circumfance that feems to indicate fuperftitious attachment.-Of thefe fhells, 2,500 are eftimated in Cafhna as equal in value to a mitkal of Fezzan, which is worth about 675 piaftres of Tripoli, or ten fhillings and three half-pence fterling.

Among the few circumftances which characterize the Trade of Cafhna, as diftinguifhed from that of Bornou, the moft remarkable is, that the Merchants of the former kingdom are the fole carriers, to other nations, of a fcarce and moft valuable commodity, which is only to be obtained from the inhabitants of the latter. For though the falt of Bornou fupplies the confumption of Cafhna, and of the Negro Kingdoms to the South, yet its owners have abandoned to the commercial activity of the Merchants of Agadez, the whole of that profitable trade.

The lakes, on the dreary fhores of which this fcarce article of African luxury is found, are feparated from Agadez by a march of five and forty days, and are encompaffed on all fides by the fands of the valt Defart of Bilma, where the ardent heat of a flaming fky is returned with double fiercenefs by the furface of the burning foil. A thoufand camels, bred and maintained for the purpofe, are faid to compofe the caravan which annually explores, in the favage wildernefs, the long line of this adventurous journey. Perilous, however, and full of hardhips as their labour is, the Merchants find an ample recompence in the profits of their commerce; for while the wretched villagers who inhabit the neighbourhood of the lakes, and collect the falt that congeals upon the fhores, are contented to receive, or obliged to accept a canty price, the value that the Merchants obtain in the various markets of Cafhna, of Tombactou, and of the countries to the South of the Niger, is fuited to the high eftimation in which the article is held.

Attentive in this manner to the means of profiting by the produce of a neighbouring country, the people of Agadez are equally anxious to avail themfelves of the commodities that are furnifhed by their own; for knowing the fuperior quality of the fenna which grows upon their mountains, they demand and receive from the Merchants of Fezzan a proportionable price.--The

The fenna of Agadez is valued in Tripoli at fourteen or fifteen mahaboobs, or from 4l. 4s. to 4l. 1os. per hundred weight, while that of Tibefti is worth no more than from nine to ten mahaboobs, or from 21. 14.s. to 31. fterling. From Tripoli the fema is exported to Turkey, Leghorn, and Marfeilles.

Of the other articles of fale which the extenfive Empire of Cafhna affords, the principal are---

Gold Duft---the value of which appears to be eftimated at a higher rate in Cafhna than in Fezzan; for in the former the worth of an ounce of 640 grains (which is the weight of an ounce in Fezzan, Cafhna, and probably in all the States between that kingdom and the Niger) is faid to be nine mitkals, or 4 l . 1os. fterling; whereas an ounce of the fame weight is worth in Fezzan but 4 l. In Cafhna the value of an Englifh ounce of 480 grains is confequently 31. 7s. 6d. whereas in Fezzan it is only 3l.

Slaves---In what manner thefe are obtained, does not diftinctly appear; but the value of a male flave is faid to be from 15 to 20,000 cowries, or from 31. to 41. ferling:

That of a female flave is defcribed as being two-thirds of the Z former, former, or from 10,000 to 13,334 cowries, which in Englifh money would be from 2l. to 21 . 13 s. 4 d .

Cotton Cloths---which are the general manufacture of Cafhna, of Bornou, and of the Negro States to the South of the Niger:

Goat-kins---of the red and of the yellow dyes:

Ox and Buffalo Hides:

Civet---the mode of obtaining which, as well as the principal markets for its fale, were defrribed in the account which has been given of the trade of Bornou.

In return for thefe articles the inhabitants of Cafhna receive---

Cowries---a fea fhell which is brought from the coaft, and conftitutes the common fpecie of the empire:

Horfes and Mares----which are purchafed from the Merchants of Fezzan; but whether bred in that country, or procured from the Arabs, or from the people of Bornou, is not mentioned by the Shereef:

Red

Red Woollen Caps,

Check Linens,*
Light coarfe Woollen Cloths,
Baize,
Barakans or Alhaiks,
Small Turkey Carpets,
Plain Mefurata Carpets,
Silk, wrought and unwrought,
Tiffues and Brocades,
Sabre Blades,
Dutch Knives,
Scizzars,
Coral,
Beads,
Small Looking-Glaffes,
Tickera---a pafte which is prepared in Fezzan from dates and the meal of Indian corn, and which, whenever they travel, is in great requeft among the people of Fezzan:

Z 2
Gooroo

[^16]Gooroo Nuts---which are brought from the Negro States on the South of the Niger, and which are principally valued for the pleafant bitter that they communicate to any liquid in which they are infufed.

CHAPTER VIII.

Countries South of the Niger.

'THE account which the Shereef has given of fuch of the kingdoms to the South of the Niger as he himfelf has vifited, is too deficient in geographical information to furnifh a clear and determinate idea of this part of his travels: and though the names of the principal States in whofe capitals he traded, or through whofe dominions he paffed, may be ufed with advantage as the means of future enquiry, and are therefore inferted in the map which accompanies this Narrative; yet the places affigned them muft be confidered as in fome degree conjectural. That the line of his journey was towards the Gold Coaft, there is, however, the
the frongeft reafon to believe; and the following brief account of his remarks may lead to conclufions which are neither uninterefting nor unimportant.

From that part of the Niger which forms the fouthern limit of the great Empire of Cafhna, to the Kingdom of Tonouwah, which borders on the coant of the Chriftians, and of which the Town of Affenté is faid to be the capital, a fucceffion of hills, among which are mountains of a ftupendous height, diverffifies or conftitutes the general face of the country. Moft of the lands are defcribed as already cleared, but fome particular diftricts are fill incumbered with woods of a vaft extent; and though for the moft part the highlands are paftured by innumerable flocks of fheep, and by herds of cows and goats, and the vales exhibit the captivating view of fucceffive villages, encompaffed with corn and rice, and fruits of various kinds, yet there are places of native fterility and eternal barrennefs.

The double occupations of the fhepherd and of the hurbandman compofe the general employment of the people; while the cotton cloth, and the goat-fkins of the red and of the yellow dyes, that are offered in feveral of the towns for fale, announce the the rudiments of future manufactures, and perhaps of an extenfive commerce.

Exempted by the nature of their climate from many of thofe hardhips from which, in other countries, drefs is the principal protection, a large proportion of the inhabitants wear only the covering that decency requires. But moft of the Mahometans, as the mark of a religion which they are proud to profefs, adorn their heads with the folds of the turban, and alfo adopt, at leaft in fome of the States, the cotton fhirt, which is fo much worn in the empires of Carhna and Bornou.

Tents, which are formed of the hides of cows or of buffaloes, and which are peculiarly fuited to the flepherd life, are the only dwellings of multitudes of the Negros; while the huts, which others erect with the branches of trecs, are of a conftruction almoft equally fimple.

Several of the towns are defcribed as furrounded by walls; and bows and arrows are mentioned as the common inftruments of war.

In the defcription of their Governments, a ferv inftances of fmall Republics are given; but mof of their States are monarchical ; and of thefe, the inhabitants of the Mahometan Kingdom of Degombah are diftinguithed by the cuftom of taming the Elephant, and by that of felling for faves the prifoners they take from fuch of the bordering nations as motives of religion or of avarice prompt them to invade.

Such, however, is the mildnefs of the Negro character, that even the afperities of religious difagreement appear to have no effect on their general conduct; for thefe is reafon to believe, from the Shereef's account, that the Muffelman and the Pagan are indifcriminately mixed, that their cattle feed upon the fame mountain, and that the approach of evening fends them in peace to the fame village: and though the nations who are attacked by the people of Degombah punifh with death, as guilty of atrocious injuftice, fuch of the invaders as the chance of war throws into their hands, yet thofe of the Mahometans who vifit them for the purpofes of trade, are received with protection and refpect.

To the Merchants of Fezzan, who travel to the fouthern States of the Negros, the purchafe of gold, which the dominions of feveral, and efpecially of thofe of Degombah, abundantly dantly afford, is always the firft object of commercial acquifition. The other articles which they obtain, confift of Slaves, Cotton Cloth,
Goat-Skins, of a beautiful dye,
Hides of Buffaloes and Cows, and
A fpecies of Nut---which is much valued in the kingdoms to the North of the Niger, and which is called Gooroo. It grows on a large and broad leafed tree that bears a pod of about eighteen inches in length, in which are inclofed a number of nuts that varies from feven to nine. Their colour is a yellowifh green; their fize is that of a chefnut, which they alfo refemble in being covered by a hufk of a fimilar thickncfs; and their tafte, which is defcribed as a pleafant bitter, is fo grateful to thofe who are accuftomed to its ufe, and fo important as a corrective to the unpalatable or unwholefome waters of Fezzan, and of the other kingdoms that border on the vaft Zahara, as to be deemed of importance to the happinefs of life.

No commercial value appears to be annexed to the fleeces which the numerous flocks of the Negro kingdoms afford; for the cotton manufacture, which, the Shereef fays, is eftablifhed among the tribes to the South of the Niger, feems to be the only fpecies of weaving that is known among them. Perhaps the dark colour of the fleece, as difqualifying it for the dye, may be one reafon, and its coarfe and hairy nature may be another, of the little efteem in which it appears to be held.

$$
\text { A a } \quad \text { only }
$$

In return for the articles which they fell to their foreign vifitors, the Negros receive---

Salt, from the Merchants of Agadez,
Dutch Knives,
Sabre Blades,
Carpets,
Coral,
Beads,
Looking-Glaffes,

Civet,

Imperial Dollars and Brafs---from both of which the Negro artifts manufacture rings and bracelets for their women.

Fire Arms are unknown to fuch of the nations on the South of the Niger as the Shereef has vifited; and the reafon which he affigns for it is, that the Kings in the neighbourhood of the coaft, perfuaded that if thefe powerful inftruments of war fhould reach the the poffeffion of the populous inland States, their own independence would be loft, have ftrictly prohibited, and by the wifdom of their meafures, have effectually prevented this dangerous merchandize from paffing beyond the limit of their dominions.

CHAPTER IX.

> General View of the Trade from Fezzan to Tripoli, Bornou, Cafbna, and the Countries on the South of the Niger.

IN the general defcription of Fezzan, an account was given of the various articles of native produce which fupply the wants, or contribute to the trade of its people; but of their Foreign Commerce, for which, like the Dutch in Europe, they are eminently diftinguifhed, the detail was purpofely deferred: for till a previous account of the countries to which that commerce is eftabliihed had been exhibited, no adequate conception of its nature or extent could be eafily conveyed.

At the latter end of October, when the ardent heat of the Summer months is fucceeded by the pleafant mildnefs and fettled ferenity of Autumn, the feveral caravans that are refpectively deftined for Tripoli and Bornou and Cafhna, and the Negro Nations beyond the Niger, take their departure from Mourzouk, the capital of Fezzan. The parties which compofe them are generally fmall; for unlefs information has been received that the road is infefted with robbers, ten or a dozen Merchants, attended by twice as many camels, and by the neceffary fervants, conftitute the ufual ftrength of the caravan; but if an attack is apprehended, an affociation of forty or fifty men, with mufkets for their defence, is formed; and as none of the Africans to the South of Fezzan (the people of Agadez and the nations on the coaft excepted) have yet poffeffed themfelves of fire-arms, the collective force of fuch a number is fufficient to infure their fafety.

Their ftore of provifions ufually confifts of dates; of meal prepared from barley, or from Indian corn, and previoufly deprived of all its moifture in an oven temperately heated; and of mutton, which is cured for the purpofe, by the treble procefs of being falted and dried in the fun, and afterwards boiled in oil or fat ; a procefs which gives it, even in that climate, a lafting prefervation.

In all the principal towns to which they trade, the Merchants of Fezzan have Factors, or confidential Friends, to whofe care, till their return, or till their inftructions as to the market hall arrive, they confign fuch Negros as they purchafe, perfectly affured that the flaves will be forwarded by the Agents accordingto the orders they receive; but their gold duft, as being more eafily conveyed, and lefs dependent for its value on the choice of the market, is feldom entrufted to the Factor.

The caravans which proceed to Tripoli are freighted partly with trona, the produce of their native land, and partly with fenna and gold duft and flaves, the produce of the fouthern countries with which they trade ; and in return they bring back the cutlery and woollens (particularly red woollen caps) and filks, wrought and unwrought, together with the Imperial dollars, the copper and the brafs, which are requifite for the confumption of thofe countries or for their own.

The caravans which travel to Bornou are loaded with the following goods:

Brafs and Copper---for the currency of Bornou. The caravan which Mr. Lucas accompanied from Tripoli to Mefurata, had brought ten camel loads or forty hundred weight of thefe metals for the Bornou market: their value in Bornou is about four fhillings fterling for each pound weight.

Imperial Dollars---which are called in Arabic Real Abotacia, and the value of which, in comparifon with the dollars of Spain, is, at Tripoli, as 365 piaftres to 340 , or nearly as 16 to 15 :

Red Woollen Caps,
Check Linens,

- Light coarfe Cloth,

Baize,
Barakans or Alhaiks,
Small Carpets of Turkey,
Small plain Carpets of Mefurata,
Silk, wrought and unwrought,
Tiffues and Brocades---for the Royal Family and other perfons of rank,

Sabre Blades,
Dutch Knives,
Sciffars,

Coral,
Beads,
Small Looking-Glaffes,
Gooroo Nuts---that grow on the South of the Niger, and are much valued in Bornou for the pleafant tafte which they communicate to water.

Of the native produce of Fezzan the only article which is brought as merchandize to Bornou is a preparation of pounded dates, and of the meal of Indian corn, highly dried in an oven. It is called Tickera, and is valued, efpecially by Travellers, as a portable and highly falubrious food.

In return for the goods which they bring to Bornou the Merchants take back with them,

Slaves,
Gold Duft,
Civet---for the markets on the South of the Niger.

The exports from Fezzan to Caßbna and its dependent States, conffift of the following articles:

B b Cowries---

Cowries---a fea fhell (in Arabic, called Hueddah) which conftitutes the circulating fpecie of this empire, and of the Negro kingdoms, and which the Merchants procure from the Southem nations who border on the coaft; 17,062 are confidered in Cafhna as equivalent to an Englifh ounce ( 480 grains) of gold :

Brafs---from which the Smiths of the country manufacture rings and bracelets for their women:

Horfes,
Red Woollen Caps,
Check Linens,
Light coarfe Cloth,
Baize,
Barakans, or Alhaiks,
Small Turkey Carpets,
Plain Mefurata Carpets,
Silk, wrought and unwrought,
Tiffues and Brocades,
Sabre Blades,
Dutch Knives,
Scifars,
Coral,

Beads,
Small Looking-Glaffes,
Tickera---a preparation of pounded dates, and the meal of Indian corn, which is manufactured in Fezzan:

Gooroo Nuts---which are brought from the Negro Countries on the South of the Niger.

The articles received in return, are---

Gold Duft---of which an Englifh ounce (or 480 grains) appears to be valued at 31. 8s. 3d. though in Fezzan it feems to be worth no more than 3l. The Fezzanners, in all probability, make themfelves amends by the price which they charge upon their goods.

Slaves-----a male flave is worth in Cafhna, from 3l. Ios. to 51.---a female flave is worth two-thirds of the amount, or from 2l. 6s. 8d. to 3l. 6s. 8d.

Cotton Cloths---of various colours, principally blue and white, of which in the Empire of Cafhna, and in the Negro States to the South of the Niger, great quantities are made:

B b 2
Goat

Goat Skins---dyed red or yellow,
Ox and Buffalo Hides---for tents,
Senna from Agadez---a province of the Cafhna Empire; the Agadez fenna is worth at Tripoli, from fourteen to fifteen mahaboobs (4l. 4s. to 4l. 10s. fterling) per hundred weight; that which the Fczzanners obtain at Tibefti is only worth per hundred weight, from nine to ten mahaboobs, or from 2l. 14s. to 3l. fterling.

Civet.

To fuch of the various nations inhabiting the Country on the South of the Niger as they are accuftomed to vifit, the Merchants of Fezzan convey the following articles:
Sabre Blades,
Dutch Knives,
Carpets,
Coral,
Beads,
Looking-Glaffes,
Brafs,
Imperial Dollars,
Givet.

In return the Merchants receive---

Gold Duft,

Slaves,

Cotton Cloths---of various colours.
Goat Skins---red and yellow.
Ox and Buffalo Hides,
Gooroo Nuts---for fale in Cafhna, Bornou, and Fezzan, where they are purchafed at the rate of $12 s$. for one hundred pods:

Cowries---for fale in Cafhna.
Ivory, though very common in the country to the South of the Niger, is not confidered by the Merchants of Fezzan, as an article of profitable tranfport, the demand for it on the Coaft being fuch as induces them to fell to the Negros who traffic there, the teeth which in the courfe of their journey, they often find in the woods. *

Such

[^17]Such are the principal branches of the extenfive commerce of the Merchants of Fezzan; from a view of which it appears, that,

The goods exported from Fezzan, confift of the following European articles:
Woollen Cloths,
Linens of different Sorts,
Gun Barrels,
Gun and Piftol Locks,
Small Shot, Ball,
Iron Bars,
Tin,
Copper,
Brafs,
Brafs Dithes,
Nails,
Spices,
Mufk, Benzoin, Dying Wood,
Allum,
Tartar for Dying,
Green Vitriol,
Verdigreafe,
Brimftone,
Looking-Glaffes.
Ben Alli.
that, vaft as their concerns are, they have little communication with any of the States that are fituated to the Weft of the Empire of Cafhna; a circumftance which the Shereef afcribes to the want of a proper conveyance for their goods; for the country on the Weft of Cafhna furnifhes but few camels, and even horfes and mules are fingularly fcarce and dear.

CHAPTER X.

Rout from Moursouk to Grand Cairo, according to Hadgee Abdalab Benmileitan, the prefent Governor of Mefurata.

Placed in a fituation which affords an eafy intercourfe with the Mediterranean, and therefore with the States of Europe, on the one hand, and on the other with the extenfive Empires of Bornou and Cafhna, the dominions of Tombuctou, and the various nations of Negros to the South of the Niger, the Merchants of Fezzan are happily poffeffed of the farther advantage of communicating by a fafe and comparatively comC c modious modious paffage with the Cities of Grand Cairo and of Mecca. A pilgrimage to the latter, the object, from time immemorial, of veneration in Arabia, is prefcribed to every Muffelman; and though the greateft part of the believers in Mahomet, deterred by diftance, or reftrained by the avocations of bufinefs and the feelings of domeftic attachment, content themfelves with imperfect refolutions of performing at fome future period this arduous journer, yet there are perfons, even from the innermoft receffes of Africa, who think, that a pofitive injunction of their faith is too folemn for excufes, and too momentous for delay. Prompted by this urgent confideration, or allured by the honourable diftinction which attends upon the title of Hadgee, the envied appellation of thofe who have vifited the facred Temple, a number of the faithful from the Empires of Bornou and Caflna, from the extenfive kingdom of Caffaba, and from feveral of the Negro States, refort to Fezzan, and proceed from thence, with the caravan, which in the Autumn of every fecond or third year takes its departure for Mecca. The caravan, which feldom confifts of lefs than one hundred, or of more than three hundred Travellers, affembles at Mourzouk, and begins its journey in the laft week of October, or in the firft of the fucceeding month.

Temiffa, a town in the dominions of Fezzan, and fituated to the Eaft North Eaft of Mourzouk, receives them at the clofe of the feventh day; and in two days more, of eafy travelling, they arrive at a lofty mountain, rocky, uninhabited, and barren, of the name of Xanibba. Having recruited their goat-fkin bags from the only well which thefe fullen heights afford, they defcend to a vaft and dreary defart, whofe hilly furface, for four fucceffive days, prefents nothing to the eye but one continued extent of black and naked rock ; to which, for three days more, the equally barren view of a foft and fandy ftone fucceeds. Through all this wide expanfe of varied nakednefs no trace of animal or vegetable life, not even the defart thorn, is feen. On the eighth day, the vaft mountain of Ziltan, the rugged fides of which are marked with fcanty fpots of brufhwood, and are enriched with ftores of water, increafes the labour of the journey. Four days are devoted to the toils of this ftupendous paffage; four others are employed in croffing the fultry plain that firetches its barren fands from the foot of the mountain to the verdant heights of Sibbeel, where the wells of water and the chearing view of multitudes of antelopes fufpend their fatigues, and anticipate the refrefhments that await them on the next cvening; for the clofe of the following day conducts them to the town of Augela.

$$
\mathrm{Cec}_{2}
$$

From that place, which is fubject to Tripoli, and is famed for the abundance and excellent flavour of its dates, they proceed in one day to the little village of Gui Xarrah; another brings them to the long afcent of the broad mountain of Gerdóbah, from whofe inflexible barrennefs the Traveller, in the courfe of a five days paffage, can only collect a fcanty fupply of unpalatable water. Defcending from thefe mournful highlands, he enters the narrow plain of Gegabib, fandy and uninhabited, yet fertile in dates, which the people of Duna (a town dependant on Tripoli, and fituated on the Coaft at the diftance of eight days journey from Gegabib) annually gather.

From this fcene of gladfome contraft to the inveterate rocks of Gerdóbah, a three days march conducts the caravan to another defolate mountain of the name of Bufelema, that furnifhes only water; and in three days more they enter the dominions of the independent Republic of See-wah.

Governed by a Council of fix or eight Elders, whofe lafting diffentions divide the opinions and diftract the allegiance of the people, this unfortunate State is conftantly involved in the miferies of inteftine war. Its chief produce is the date tree; for the lands, though not deftitute of water, furnifh but little corn.

From

From Sce-wah, the capital, the caravan procesds in a fingle day to the miferable village of Umfeguér, which is one of the dependencies of the State, and is fituated at the foot of the mountainous Defart of Le Mágra, where, in the long courfc of a feven days paffage, the Traveller is fcarcely fenfible that a few fpots of thir and meagre brufhwood flightly interrupt the vaft expanfe of fterility, and diminifh the amplitude of defolation. The eighth day terminates with his arrival at the hill of Huaddy L'Ottrón, which is diftinguifhed by a fmall convent, of three Chriftian Monks, who refide there under the protection of Cairo, and to whofe hofpitable entertainment the Traveller is largely indebted. Buildings, furrounded with high walls, and erected in the neighbourhood of the convent, are opened for his reception; and for three fucceffive days, if he chufes to be their gueft fo long, his wants, as far as their means extend, are chearfully and liberally fupplied.

Their garden, in which is a well of excellent and never-failing water, affords an ample ftore of vegetables of various kinds ; the maintenance of a few fheep is furnifhed by an adjoining pafture ; and they raife, without difficulty, a numerous breed of fowls. All other articles, except their bread, which they manufacture themfelves, they receive from Cairo.

Reipected by the $\Lambda$ rabs, who revere their hofpitality more than they hate their religion, thefe venerable men are apparently fecure.-----Yet as too much confidence might invite the meaneft plunderers to invade their peaceful dwelling, they have cautioully guarded their convent by a feparate and lofty inclofure from an opening in which a ladder of ropes furnifhes the means of defcent.

Leaving this hofpitable hill with fuch refrefhments as the generous Fathers could fupply, the caravan continues its courfe, and on the fifth day arrives at the City of Cairo, from whence, at the ufual feafon, it proceeds by the cuftomary rout to Mecca.

CHAPTER XI.

Conclufions fuggefed by the preceding Narrative.

From the perufal of the preceding account, the Society are enabled to judge of the credit which it deferves, and of the value of the information which it offers. If the evidence of its truth fhould be thought infufficient, they will keep their minds in fufpence till Narratives of more confirmed authenticity fhall difprove or eftablifh the relation. But if they fhould think that the Shereef's account of Bornou and of the Niger is too ftrongly fupported by the correfponding defcription of Ben Alli, to leave a fufpicion of its falfehood; and that the fidelity of this part of his his Narrative warrants the belief of whatever elfe is equally defcribed on the authority of his perfonal knowledge, then they will feel that conclufions of an important and interefting nature refult from the various, though imperfect intelligence which he has furnihed.

The prefent flate of the Empire of Bornou, compared with its condition when Leo Africanus, who wrote his account in the year 1526 , was its vifitor, exhibits an interefting proof of the advancement of the Mahometan Faith, and of the progrefs of imperfect civilization. * A favage nakednefs, or the rude cover-

* Leos Hiftory of Africa, book 7 th, pages 293 and 294. Englifh edition. " Of the Kingdom of Borno."
" The inhabitants in Summer go all naked, except at their waifs, which they " cover with a piece of leather: but all Winter they are clad in fkins, and have " beds of ikins alfo. They embrace no religion at all, being neither Chriftians, " Mahometans, nor Jews, nor of any other profeffion, but living after a brutifh " manner, and having wives and children in common : and (as I underftood of a " certain Merchant that abode a long time among them) they have no proper " names at all, but every one is nick-named according to his length, his fatnefs, " or fome other qualitie. They have a moft puiffant Prince, being lineally de" fcended from the Lybian people called Bardoa: horfemen he hath in a continual "readinefs, to the number of 3000 , and an huge number of footmen, for all his "fubjects, ing which the fkins of beafts afford, are now relinquifhed, for the decency and convenience of a drefs of cotton manufacture. Tempered by the courtefy of commerce, and the conciliating interchange of important benefits, the antient barbarifm of the people is foftened to habits of kindnefs; and, in the minds of the greateft part, the abfurd fuperftitions of Paganifm have given place to the natural and fublime idea of the Unity of God.

From the account of the nations to the South of the Niger, it appears, that, among the Mahometan Blacks, the fternnefs of the Muffelman is foftened by the mildnefs of the Negro ; and D d that
"f fubjects are fo ferviceable and obedient unto him, that whenfoever he command"6 eth them, they will arme themfelves and follow him whither he pleafeth to " conduct them. They paye unto him none other tribute but the tithes of all their "s corne : neither hath this King any revenues to maintain his Eftate, but only " fuch fpoils as he getteth from his next enimes by often invafions and affaults."
-" Yet the King feemeth to be marveilous rich; for his fpurs, his bridles, " platters, difhes, pots, and other veffels wherein his meat and drink are brought " to the table, are all of pure gold : yea, and the chains of his dogs and hounds "6 are of gold alfo. Howbeit this King is extremely covetous, for he had much ${ }^{66}$ rather pay his debts in flaves than in gold. In this kingdome are great multi"s tudes of Negros and of other people, the names of whom (bicaufe I tarried here "f but one month) I could not well note.".
that if the zeal of the invader be not inflamed by the value of the captive, the propagation of the faith is feldom confidered as a reafon or pretext for war.

Perhaps the attention of the Pbilofopher may be engaged by the ufe to which the fmall fhells of the Maldive Illands are equally applied by the inhabitants of Cafhna, and by the natives of Bengal. Samenefs of opinion, or refemblance of conduct, when founded in natural feeling, or a fimilar flate of fociety, are feen without wonder in nations unconnected and remote; but that a cuftom fo arbitrary and artificial as that of employing Cowries as a fubftitute for coin, a cuftom which inftinet could not have produced, and chance could fcarcely have occafioned, fhould equally prevail among the Negros of Africa and the natives of Bengal, may juftly be deemed a curious and interefting phenomenon.

To the Britifh Traveller, a defire of exchanging the ufual excurfion from Calais to Naples, for a Tour more extended and important, and of paffing from fcenes with which all are acquainted, to refearches in which every object is new, and each ftep is difcovery, may recommend the Kingdom of Fezzan. If Antiquities be his favourite purfuit, the ruins which fhadow the cottages cottages of Jermah and of Temiffa, promife an ample gratification: or if the ftudy of Nature be his wifh, the expanfive fcenes and numerous productions of that uninveftigated foil may equally promote his entertainment and his knowledge. But if a fpirit of more adventurous refearch fhould induce him to travel with the Merchants of Fezzan, difcoveries of fuperior value may diftinguifh and reward his toil. The powerful Empires of Bornou and Cafhna will be open to his inveftigation ; the luxurious City of Tombuctou, whofe opulence and fevere police attract the Merchants of the moft diffant States of Africa, will unfold to him the caufes of her vaft profperity; the myfterious Niger will difclofe her unknown original and doubtful termination; and countries unveiled to antient or modern refearch will become familiar to his view. Or fhould he be willing to join the Cairo Caravan, the difcovery of the antient fcite, and of whatever elfe may remain of the Temple of Jupiter Ammon, may perhaps be attempted with fuccefs : for the fame caufes which gave birth to the fprings, and, by their means, to the luxuriant vegetation of the antient domains of the Temple, muit ftill continue to diftinguifh the fortunate foil ; and there feems no reafon to doubt that the hofpitable convent of Huaddy L'Ottrón, or the neighbouring Republic of See-wah, will not only furnifh a place of convenient departure and of eafy retreat, but will alfo fupply

$$
\mathrm{Dd}_{2}
$$

the requifite information, and the neceffary aid. At this time, an Interpreter, who is equally acquainted with Arabic and Englifh, may be found in London; and, at all times, the Cities of Tripoli, of Tunis, and of Ceuta, afford a number of Mahometans who are almoft as converfant with the Italian or the Spanifh, as with the Arabic, their native language.

But of all the advantages to which a better acquaintance with the Inland Regions of Africa may lead, the firt in importance is, the extenfion of the Commerce, and the encouragement of the Manufactures of Britain. That fire-arms are in requeft with all nations, civilized and favage, who have the means of obtaining them, experience uniformly proves; and we now learn, that to the jealoufy which the Princes on the Southern Coaft entertain of the powerful Interior States, and to the total neglect of all opportunities of opening, from more favourable quarters, an immediate communication with the inland country, it is owing that the fale of one of the moft profitable manufactures of Great Britain is ftill in a great meafure confined to the fcanty Tribes which inhabit the fhores of the Atlantic. From the fame information we are alfo led to conclude, that the anxious policy which prohibits the conveyance of fire-arms to the Inland Tribes, dictates, as a neceffary caution, the fevereft reftraints ftraints on the tranfit of other merchandize. But if, on the fyftem of the Moors, the effect of which has been tried too long for its wifdom to be difputed, affociations of Englifhmen fhould form caravans, and take their departure from the higheft navigable reaches of the Gambia, or from the fettlement which is lately eftablifhed at Sierra Leona, there is reafon to believe, that countries new to the fabrics of England, and probably inhabited by more than a hundred millions of people, may be gradually opened to her trade. On this fyftem, much greater would be their profits than thofe which the Merchants of Fezzan receive; for they would reach, by a journey of 700 miles from their veffels, the fame markets to which a land-carriage of 3000 conveys from the Mediterranean the goods of the Fezzanners; and they would alfo poffefs the farther advantage of obtaining at prime coft, the fame articles for which the Merchants of Fezzan are fubjected to the complicated difadvantages of a high price, of an inferior quality, and of the varying exactions that the defpotic Governments of Barbary impofe. Now if it be confidered, that notwithftanding the vaft expence of landcarriage, and of an exorbitant price on the purchafe of the articles which they fell, the Traders of Fezzan are ftill enabled to collect a profit that upholds and encourages their commerce, it muft be evident, that the gain which the Merchants of England would derive from a fimilar traffic, conducted as is here propofed, would be fuch as ferv commercial adventures have ever been found to yield. That no difficulties will attend the execution of the Plan, the general hiftory of new undertakings forbids us to believe; but as far as the climate and religion of the Negros are in queftion, there feems to be little difcouragement; for the long defcent of the rivers is a proof that the elevation of the inland country is raifed above the level of the coaft, and confequently that the climate is much more temperate, and probably more falubrious: and while the Narrative of the Shereef announces that the Merchant is confidered by the Negro as the general friend of Mankind, common experience convincingly fhews that, in the judgement of the Pagan, the Crefcent and the Crofs are objects of equal indifference ; and that the comparative welcome of the Muffelman and of the Chriftian depends on their Merchandize rather than their Creed,

As little difcouragement is fuggefted by a view of the purchafable goods of which the natives are poffeffed; for, independently of their cotton, which in all the interior nations is defcribed as of common manufacture, and therefore as of general growth, their mines of gold (the improveable pofieffion of many of the Inland States) will furnifh, to an unknown, and probably probably boundlefs extent, an article that commands, in all the markets of the civilized world, a conftant and unlimited fale.

Such are the important objects of mercantile purfuit, which the various intelligence obtained by the firft efforts of the Affociation, enables them to point out and recommend to their Country: and while the contemplation of national interefts, and of the ftill more extended interefts of philofophy, directs their efforts and animates their hopes, they cannot be indifferent to the reflection, that in the purfuit of thefe advantages, and by means as peaceable as the purpofes are juft, the conveniencies of civil life, the benefits of the mechanic and manufacturing arts, the attainments of fcience, the energies of the cultivated mind, and the elevation of the human character, may in fome degree be imparted to nations hitherto configned to hopelefs barbarifm and uniform contempt.

FOR the following Memoir, and for the Map which it defcribes, the Society are indebted to the eminent talents and ardent zeal in the Promotion of Geographical Im. provement that diftinguigh the charafter of Mafor RenNELL.

Ee
F

CHAPTER XII.

Confruction of the Map of Africa.

THAT the Geography of Africa has made a flower progrefs towards improvement than that of every other part of the world, during the laft, and the prefent century, is to be attributed more to natural caufes, than to any abfolute want of attention on the part of Geographers. Formed by the Creator, with a contour and furface totally unlike the other Continents, its interior parts elude all nautic refearch; whilft the wars and commerce in which Europeans have taken part, have been confined Ee2 to to very circumfcribed parts of its borders. Thefe moft froductive means of geographical information failing, the next refource is to collect materials from the beft informed amongft the travelled natives: I fay natives, becaufe the generality of European Travellers reckon upon fome degree of folace, as well as the gratification of curiofity, during their peregrinations: not to mention, that it is more the practice to fee what has been already feen, than to frike into a new path, and dare to contemplate an unfafhionable fubject. To the lovers of adventure and novelty, Africa difplays a moft ample field: but the qualification of local manners, and, in fome degree, of habits, muft in this cafe, be fuperadded to that of language: and this, unqueftionably, renders the undertaking more arduous than that of an ordinary Tour. But the Adventurer in queft of fame, will readily appreciate the degrees of glory attendant on each purfuit.

The 18 th century has fimiled propitioufly on the Science of Geography throughout the globe; and an Englifhman may be allowed to pride himfelf that his countrymen have had their full fhare of the glory attending this, and other kinds of refearches tending to increafe the general ftock of knowledge. It is to this firit that we are to attribute the acquifition of the materials which form the fubject of the prefent Work. It is no lefs to this fpirit that we are indebted for the progreflive improvements in the North-American and Afiatic Ceography: our fyftems embracing objeas far fuperior to the limited views with which Geographical Surveys are ordinarily undertaken: not the topography of townfhips, ditricts, counties; but the Geography of Empires, Regions, and Continents !

As both Europe, and its adjacent Continent, Asia, are fpread over with inland feas, lakes, or rivers of the moft extended navigations, fo as collectively to aid the tranfport of bulky articles of merchandize from one extreme of them to the other; and to form (like ftepping-ftones over a brook) a more commodious communication: fo likewife the northern part of the new Continent appears to have an almoft continuous Inland Navigation, which muft prove of infinite advantage to the inhabitants, when fully peopled; and contribute to their fpeedier civilization, in the mean time. But Africa flands alone in a geographical view! Penetrated by noinland feas, like the Mediterranean, Baltic, or Hudfon's Bay ; nor overfpread with extenfive lakes, like thofe of North America; nor having in common with the other Continents, rivers running from the center to the extremities : but, on the contrary, its regions feparated from each other by the leaft practicable of all boundaries, arid Defarts of of fuch formidable extent, as to threaten thofe who traverfe them, with the moft horrible of all deaths, that arifing from thirft! Placed in fuch circumftances, can we be furprifed either at our ignorance of its Interior Parts, or of the tardy progrefs of civilization in it? Poffibly, the difficulty of conveying merchandize to the coafts, under the above circumftances, may have given rife to the traffic in men, a commodity that can tranfport itfelf! But laying this out of the queftion, as an abftract fpeculation, there can be little doubt but that the progrefs of civilization amongft the Africans has been as flow as can be conceived, in any fituation: and it has alfo happened, of courfe, that the defined Inftruments of their civilization have remained in a proportional degree of ignorance concerning the nature of the country.

Nothing can evince the low fate of the African Geography, more than M. D'Anville's having had recourfe to the Works of Ptolomy and Edrisi, to compofe the Interior Part of his Map of Africa ( 1749 .) It is well known, that thofe Authors wrote in the fecond and in the twelfth centuries of our æra. Moft of the pofitions in the Inland Part of the great body of Africa are derived from Edrisi ; and it is wonderful how nearly fome of the pofitions agree with thofe furnifhed by the prefent materials.

Such was the tranfcendant judgement of D'Anville in combining the fcanty notices that are furnifhed by the Nubian Geographer!

But the Public are not to expect, even under an improved fyftem of African Geography, that the Interior Part of that Continent will exhibit an afpect fimilar to the others; rich in variety; each region affuming a diftinct character. On the contrary, it will be meagre and vacant in the extreme. The dreary expanfes of defart which often furround the habitable fpots, forbid the appearance of the ufual proportion of towns; and the paucity of rivers, added to their being either abforbed or evaporated, inftead of being conducted in flowing lines to the ocean, will give a fingular caft to its hydrography; the direction of their courfes being, moreover, equivocal, through the want of that information, which a communication with the fea ufually affords at a glance. Little as the Antients knew of the Interior Part of Africa, they appear to have underftood the character of its furface; one of them comparing it to a leopard's fkin. Swift alfo, who lofes no opportunity of being witty at the expence of mathematicians, diverts himfelf and his readers both with the nakednefs of the land, and the abfurdity of the map-makers.

> " Geographers, in Afric maps, With favage pictures fill their gaps
> And o'er unhabitable downs
> Place elephants, for want of towns."

The Society for Promoting the Difcovery of the Interior Parts of Africa has been fortunate in collecting much geographical information, in fo early a ftage of the African refearches; and there is little doubt but that in a few years all the great features of this Continent (within the reach of their enquiries) may be known and defcribed. But to accomplifh this, it will be neceffary that intelligent Europeans fhould trace fome of the principal routes; as well to apportion the diftances, as to eftablifh fome kind of criterion for the parole information derived from the natives. As yet, in the wide extent of near thirty degrees on a meridian, between Benin and Tripoli, not one celeftial obfervation has been taken, to determine the latitude.

But as far as materials compofed by a fcale founded on eftimated diftances (that is, days journeys of caravans) may go towards the eftablifhment of geographical pofitions, the itineraries made ufe of for conftructing the new matter in the accompanying map, are lefs difcordant than might be expected in fo wide an expanfe, and on the foundation of rules fo vague as thofe which neceffity has compelled me to apply. On this, however, the Reador mut exercife his own judgement, after the following expofition of the $d$ ata, and the rules by which Thave determined the fcale.

It will eafily be conceived by the Reader, that all roads, ex. cept fuch as are made through a country, in which the public works are in the higheft ftate of improvement, and where alfo the face of it is perfectly level (the curvature of the earth excepted) muft have fome degree of inflexion, both horizontally and vertically; and either of thefe will occafion a Traveller to trace a line of greater length by the road, than can be meafured on a ftraight line, drawn from the point of commencement, to that of the termination of his journey. The quantity of the difference muft vary with the nature of the country; but in ordinary cafes, ftill more with the extent of the line of diftance: for a different ratio between the road diffance and horizontal diftance muft obtain, as the line of diftance is increafed. Let it be admitted, that in ftages of ten or twelve miles, the winding of the road occafions a lofs of only one-tenth part, which may be termed the fimple winding: yet as the different fages in an extent of 100 or 150 miles, do not lie in a furaight line, drawn through the whole extent, but often very far to the right and left of it, a compound winding arifes: and I have found by long experience, that one mile in eight muft be deducted, to reduce the road meafure, on fuch a length, to horizontal meafure. When a line of diftance is extended to 500 miles and upwards, the rule becomes much more vague than when applied to moderate diftances; becaufe it often happens (and more particularly in unimproved countries) that obftacles prefent themfelves, and give an entire new direction to the courfe of the road; although the two parts of it, confidered feparately, may have only an ordinary degree of crookednefs. However, as fome of the lines of diftance applied to the prefent fubject, are from thirty to forty days journey, it becomes neceffary that fome general rules fhould be adopted. It happens that examples are furnifhed, in two cafes, - on very long journies, where the real diftances between the terminating points of the routes are nearly known: fuch is that of fifty-three days journey, between the Capital of Fezzan and Cairo; and the mean horizontal diftance for each day, is fourteen and a half geographic miles, or thofe of fixty to a degree. I confefs I fhould have expected much lefs. The other example is between Arguin and Gallam: there forty days produce thirteen miles for each day; and this is conformable to my expectations. In the examples of fmall diftances, fuch as fix days journey, fixteen miles per day is the refult, and is confiftent.

For

For a caravan journey, taken at twenty-two Britifh miles of road diftance, will produce, when the allowance for winding is deducted, and the remainder reduced to geographic miles, about fixteen and a half fuch miles for a fingle day.

The following are the proportions which I have eftablifhed, for the application of a fcale, to the different degrees of diftance.

For one day, fixteen miles and a half; for feventeen to twen-ty-five days, fifteen miles; for forty to fifty days, thirteen miles. Thefe numbers are particularly felected, becaufe they occurred in the courfe of the Work. The Reader will be pleafed to obferve, that the miles fpoken of in the conftruction, are always thofe of fixty to a degree of a great circle. However tedious this inveftigation may appear to the generality of readers, it is abfolutely neceffary; as it is the hinge upon which the whole turns: and a neglect of attention to this particular fubject, would warrant the Reader's taking the whole for granted, without further examination.

Mr. Beaufoy having given, from the materials in his poffeffion, fo full an account of each road and country, nothing reFf ${ }_{2}$ mains mains for me to do, but fimply to defcribe, from the fame materials, the mode of fixing the principal pofitions, in the Map. As the object of it is to exhibit the new matter only, care has been taken to exclude all that has already appeared, except what was abfolutely neceffary towards explaining the other: and as the borrowed particulars are diftinguifhed from the reft, the Reader cannot be mittaken. The outline of the great body of Africa, together with the courfes of the Nile, Gambia, Senegal, and Wad-drah, are copied from Mr. D'Anville.

Fezzan (or rather its capital, Mourzouk) is given in the Itineraries at the diftance of feventeen days and half from Mefurata. Thefe, taken at fifteen miles per day, produce two hundred and fixty-two miles. The bearing is faid to be South from Mourzouk; and this latter is placed according to D'Anville. Mourzouk, then, falls in latitude $27^{\circ} 20^{\prime}$.

Agadez, the next principal fation, is, at a medium forty-one days from Mourzouk, on a South Weft courfe, or thereabouts: and thefe, at thirteen miles per day, produce four hundred and fifty-five miles; and place Agadez in latitude $20^{\circ} 20^{\prime}$; and nearly in the meridian of Tripoli. Agadez is the Agadoft of Edrifi.

From

From Agadez to Cafhna is feventeen days; which, at fifteen miles per day, give a diftance of two hundred and fify-five miles. The bearing is faid to be South South Weft. Cafhna, then, will ftand in or about the latitude of $16^{\circ} 20^{\prime}$ North, and about a degree and half Weft from Tripoli.

D'Anville's Cafleenab (undoubtedly meant for Cahna) is placed about thirty-feven miles to the North Weft of the pofition affumed in the accompanying Map; whence I confider mine as a near approximation, efpecially as the diftance from Mefurata is upwards of nine hundred and feventy miles.

Calhna may be regarded as the central kington of the great body of Africa; and as a part of the region named Soudan, of which at prefent but few particulars are known, Ghanah, or Ghinnah, is placed, in refpeet of Caflna, according to M. D'Anville's Map. It does not appear whether he had any authority for placing it ninety miles to the North Eaft of Cafhna: but its pofition, in refpect of the City of Nuabia, (antiently Meroé, on the Nile) is on the authority of Edrifi. This Author alfo allows twelve days between Agadez and Ghanah: and by my conftruction, they are two hundred and eight miles afunder.

afunder. See Geog. Nubienfis; p. 39. Ghanah was in the twelfth century a city of the firt confequence. Wangara and Kanem, were alfo known to Edrifi.

The river known to Europeans by the name of Niger, runs on the South of the kingdom of Cafhna, in its courfe towards Tombuctou; and if the report which Ben Alli heard in that town, may be credited, it is afterwards loft in the fands on the South of the country of Tombuctou. In the Map, only the known part of its courfe is marked by a line ; and the fuppofitious part by dots. It may be proper to obferve, that the Africans have two names for this river; that is, Neel il Abeed, or River of the Negros; and Neel il Kibeer, or the Great River. They alfo term the Nile, (that is, the Egyptian River) Neel Shem: fo that the term Neel, from whence our Nile, is nothing more than the appellative of River; like Ganges, or Sinde.

From Cafhna the road leads Weftward to the Kingdom of Gonjah, ninety-feven days journey from the former. Gonjab, is, from circumftamces, the Conche of M. D'Anville, and the Gonge of M. Delifle ; and the fimilitude of names, however great, is she leaft proof it: for the Itinerary of the Shereef Imhammed, fays, that eighteen or twenty days from Gonjah, towards the North Weft (or between the Weft and North) lies the Country of Yarba: and eight days farther Weft, that of Affow. Now the countries of Yarra and Yaffon, will be found in Delifle's Map of Senegal ( 1726 ), nearly in the pofition that Yarba and Affow take in refpect of Gonjah; fuppofing D'Anville's Conche to be meant for it. It is extremely difficult to affign a ratio for the decreafe of the horizontal diftance, on fo extended a line as ninety-feven days journey; and therefore it would be lofing time to attempt it. Gonjah, by circumftances, is about eight hundred and feventy miles from Caflina, whichallows only nine miles for each day. I therefore conclude that the road is very circuitous.

Gonjah is reported by the Shereef to be forty-fix days journey from the Coat of Guinea, to which the Chrifians trade. It is probable that the Gold Coaft is the part meant, and that may be taken at five hundred and thirty miles from $D^{\prime}$ 'Anville's Conché. The ratio, at thirteen per day, would give near fix hundred. Here again, it would be lofing of time, to reafon on fuch a point of uncertainty, fince neither of the extreme points of the line of diftance are correctly known. The Reader muft therefore determine for himfelf. Of this fpace of forty-fix days travelling, from Gonjah towards the Coaft, the Shereef had travelled only the firft ten days, to the City of Kalanflee, a dependency of the Kingdom of Tounouzvab; the capital of which, according to his report, is Assentai (the Affianté of D'Anville) fituated midway between Kalanfhee and the fea coaft: that is, eighteen days journey from each. The Shereef alfo reports, that there is no communication between this coaft (which we may fuppofe to be the Gold Coaft) and the country of Gonjah : for that the King of Affentai, who poffeffes the fpace between, prohibits his Inland Neighbours from paffing through his country.

But Mr. Norris, a gentleman whorefided many years in Whydah, &cc. reports differently: for he fays, that there are other States, (that is, the Fantees, and their confederates) lying between Affentai and the fea; and that the Affentais have often attempted, but without fuccefs, to open a communication with the Coaft.

To return to the route from Cafhna to Gonjah. There are between them fome extenfive kingdoms or ftates, moft of which appear to preferve their antient religion. I have generally marked the progrefs of the Mahomedan Religion, by a crefcent; and the Caffre States by an arbitrary mark of a different kind.

It will appear by a flight infpection of the Map, that the Mahomedan Religion, as far as refpects the Interior Part of the Country, has fpread fouthward, to about the parallel of twelve degrees of North latitude. Probably though, in fome of thofe countries where the Court religion is Mahomedan, the bulk of the people may profefs the antient religion.

Tombuctou, is placed on the following authorities: Firf, Mr. Matra, the Britifh Conful in the dominions of Morocco, fays, on the authority of the natives, that Tombuctou is fifty days caravan travelling from Tattan, a place fituated on the common frontiers of Morocco, Drah, and Zenhaga; and in the route from Morocco, and Suz, to Tombuctou. Tattah is afcertained in pofition, by a route of Ben Alli's. He found it to be nine days and half from Morocco, and one day fhort of a ftation on the Wad-drah (or Drah River) which ftation was four days, or fixty-fix miles lower down than Tinjuleen, a place in D'Anwille's and Delifle's Maps of Africa. It was alfo twelve days journey from the City of Nun or Non, which city by Ben Alli's account, is two days from the fea coaft; and well known to be oppofite to the Cape of the fame name. Thefe authorities enable us to place Tattah one hundred and feventy miles South South Eaft from Morocco. Then, fifty days from Tattah to

$$
\text { Gg } \quad \text { Tombuctou, }
$$

Tombuctou, at thirteen each day, produces fix hundred and fifty miles. By Ben Alli's report, Tombuctou is forty-eight days from the capital of Sultan Fullan, lying within the diftrict of Gallam, on the River Senegal. The pofition of this place is not known to me; but by circumftances it muft be near the river: and in ufing materials of fo coarfe a kind, trifles muft not be regarded. Forty-eight days at thirteen each day, produce fix hundred and twenty miles; and this line of diftance meets that from Tattah, in latitude $19^{\circ} \cdot 40^{\prime}$. and nearly midway between Gallam and Cafhna. In this pofition, it falls only twenty-eight miles to the North Weft of D'Anville's Tombuctou.

It appears that moft of the road from Tattah to Tombuctou, lies acrofs the vaft Defart, commonly known by the name of Zahara, or properly, The Desart. Geography is at prefent, very bare of particulars, in this quarter. Ben Alli went from Tombuctou, direct to Fezzan, fkirting the South Eaft border of this great Defart. He reckoned only fixty-four days between Tombuctou and Fezzan, which at twelve miles and half per day, produce only eight hundred miles. The interval on the Map is nine hundred and feventy. Reafon, however, points out, that the diftance from the neareft place, Gallam, ought to be preferred. And as it is underftood, that Agadez and Tombuctou buctou are about fifty-five days afunder, it appears yet more probable that the interval between Fezzan and Tombuctou, ought not to be reduced. It muft be recollected, that Ben Alli's Communications were given from memory, after an interval of twenty years.

The point of the next importance, is Bornou, the capital of an extenfive kingdom fituated on the South Eaft of Fezzan, and between the two Neels or Niles; that of Egypt, and that of the Negros.

Bornou, is given by the Shereef, at about fifty days from Mourzouk (or Fezzan) which may be taken at fix hundred and fifty miles. He alfo reports that it is twenty-five days journey from the courfe of the Nile, where it paffes the country of Sennar ; or in diffance about three hundred and fixty miles. This would place Bornou in a direction of South Eaft, fomewhat fouthwardly, from Mourzouk; andabout the parallel of $19^{\circ} 40^{\prime}$. It is not probable that Bornou has a more wefterly pofition. Edrifi's account would place it more eafterly; for he fays, that Mattban, a city of Kanem, lies thirty-one days from Nuabia (on the Nile) through Tegua. Geog. Nub. p. 15. Edrifi's day's journey is equal to eighteen Arabic miles, or nearly nineteen geographic

Gg 2
geographic ones: confequently the thirty-one days give five hundred and eighty-feven miles. Matthan is not reported in the Itinerary; but Kanem is, both as Province and a capital City: and the pofition of the latter according to my conftruction, is feven hundred miles from Nuabia. Whether the error lies on the fide of Edrifi, or the Shereef; or arifes from the faulty pofition of Nuabia in D'Anville, cannot eafily be difcovered.

Ben Alli travelled the road between Bornou and Alexandria; but was too much indifpofed to make any obfervations, otherwife than that the Kingdom of Bornou extends fifteen days journey, or about two hundred and thirty miles, in that direction. This was particularly unfortunate; for whichfoever route he went, he muft have croffed fome one or more of the OASES; and of courfe fome important matter would have been added to the Map.

The only route of importance that remains to be difcuffed, is that from Fezzan or Mourzouk, to Cairo, leading to Mecca; for, at Mourzouk the Mahomedans from the fouthern and weftern parts of Africa, who intend to make a pilgrimage to Mecca, affemble at the proper feafon, as at a common point of departure. The route to Cairo, which requires fifty-three days to atchieve atchieve, appears on the Map to be feven hundred and feventy miles; being equal to fourteen and half for each day: and is on the whole, feventy more than I fhould have expected that number of days to produce. To what degree of accuracy the difference of longitude between Mefurata and Cairo, is afcertained, I am ignorant: as alfo whether the bearing of Mourzouk from Mefurata, be right. Fourteen miles and half of horizontal diftance for each day, on fo long a line of diffance, and on fo rugged a way as the Itinerary defribes, is too great a proportion; and we may fufpect an error fomewhere.

A circumftance occurs in the Itinerary, which would determine how near this route approaches to the Coaft of the Mediterranean Sea ; if we might depend on the accuracy of the Itinerift. The dates produced in the Plain of Gegabib, are gathered by the people of Duna, who inhabit the fea coaft, eight days journey off; or about one hundred and thirty miles. No fuch place as Duna appears in the modern maps; but Derna (antiently Darnis) does: and it is fituated within the confines of Tripoli, as Duna is faid to be. But the diftance muft be faulty; becaufe Augela is the neareft point in this route, to Derna, though ten days from it : and Gegabib, is feven days from Augela, in a direction that ftill increafes the diftance.

Augela is found in Herodotus, Book IV. under the name of左gila; and in Ptolemy and Pliny it is written Augila. In Ptolemy, Africa Tab. III. it is placed about 197 miles from the fea coaft, and about a degree of longitude to the eaftward of Darnis. Its longitudinal pofition from Mourzouk and Cairo, agrees very well: and confidering the extent of Ptolemy's local knowledge in this quarter, we may fuppofe him well acquainted with its diftance from the coaft. Allowance muft be made for an excefs of diftance given by Ptolemy's fcale, in this Map; and it being in the proportion of twenty-feven to twenty-three, the one hundred and ninety-feven miles fhould be reduced to one hundred and fixty-eight: and according to this, Augela ought to ftand in latitude $29^{\circ} 20^{\prime}$; and nearly midway between Mourzouk and Cairo.

Gegabib, as has been faid before, is feven days journey from Augela, towards Cairo; and as I have a particular pleafure in producing any authority that ferves to prove the veracity of fuch an Author as Herodotus, I fhall juft mention, that (in B.IV.) he fays, that the Nafamones in the Summer feafon, leave their cattle on the coaft, and go to the plains of Ægila, to gather the fruit of the Palm trees, which abound in that place. The pofition of this coaft, is marked by its lying on the Weft of Teu-

Teuchira, * a fea-port that lay within the diftrict of Cyrene, now better known by the names of Curin and Barca.

Ptolemy's Nafamones, occupy, in refpect of Augila, the very fpot where the dates are now gathered in the plain of Gebabib: and therefore we may conclude that the Nafamones' Territories extended at leaft from that plain, to the Eaftern Coaft of the Great Syrtis. It may, perhaps, in future, be known where the Port or Coaft of Duna is; whether it be Derna, the antient Darnis, or fome place on the Syrtis.

Between Augela and See-roab, the next town towards Cairo (and probably the Siropum of Ptolemy) the road paffes over a chain of very high mountains, named in thefe times Gerclobab: and this is unquettionably the fame ridge that terminates on the Mediterranean, a few days journey farther on ; and which by the fuddennefs of its defcent towards the fea, was antiently named Catabatbmus. This chain or ridge divided Cyrene from Marmarica.

The

[^18]The fcite of the antient Temple of fupiter Ammon, was a few days journey (perhaps four or five) inland from the plain of Gegabib, fo often mentioned. I think I may venture to fay this on the authority of Herodotus, Strabo, Pliny, and Arrian; from each of whom, fome particulars may be collected refpecting its fituation. Firf, Herodotus fays, (Book IV.) that the Temple is fituated ten days from Agila; (frequented by the Nafamones on account of the dates) and on the road from Thebes to Agila. Next, Arrian fays, on the authority of Ariftobulus, that Alexander went to it, from the fcite of his new city of Alexandria, along the fea coafts of Egypt and Marmarica, to Paraetonium: which latter was fituated, according to the faine authority, fixteen hundred ftadia from Alexandria. Pliny gives it at two hundred Roman miles (Book V.) Thefe accounts are perfectly conclufive; and the pofition of Paraetonium, is alfo very clear in Ptolemy ; and is moreover known to the Moderns under the name of $A l$ Bareton: fo that no difficulty can arife here. Arrian fays farther, that Alexander ftruck inland from Paraetonium, and entered the Defart: but he does not fay how far the Temple lay from the fea coaft. This is fupplied by Strabo, (Book XXVII.) who gives the diftance at thirteen hundred ftadia. Allowing thefe to produce one hundred and thirty, or one hundred and forty miles; and taking Herodotus's ten days from Augela at one hundred and feventy (we muft not confider them as caravan journies, but as ordinary ones) the meeting of thefe lines of diftance, place the Temple in latitude twenty-nine degrees, and a fimall fraction ; and in a South Wefterly direction from Parætonium. Pliny fays, (Book V.) that the Temple is four hundred [Roman] miles from Cyrene ; that is, twice as far as Paratonium is from Alexandria: and this agrees with the former pofition. Laftly, Ptolemy places it one hundred and nine-ty-five geographic miles from Parcetonium; and from Cyrene three hundred and forty.---But Ptolemy's fcale, in Africa Tab. III. gives too much diftance (as I have faid before), and corrected, it fhould be one hundred and fixty-fix from Paretonium. As thefe authorities do not vary amongft themfelves more than thirty miles, I confider them as conclufive.
M. D'Anville's pofition of this Temple is about thirty miles farther to the Southward ; that is, from the Mediterranean; but he does not quote his authorities. In his Geograpkie Ancienne Abregree, vol. iii. p. 42. he has the following paffage: "Selon " la Géographie actuelle, ce qu'on trouve fous le nom de Sant" rieh, paroit en tenir la place ; \& par la Nature du pays, qui " ne laiffe point diftinguer d'autre objet, on n'eit point embar"raffé fur le choix." Edrifi (Geo. Nub. p. 4r.) places SontHh. rie sie ten days Eaftward from Augela, and nine days from the Mediterrancan; which carries Sant-rie farther from the fea-coaft, than Strabo allows to the Temple ; but accords with Ptolemy. Savary, vol. ii. Lett. vIII.) quotes Abulfeda, to thew that the Oafes were only three days journey Weft of the Nile; and Ptolemy places the largeft of them, named El War by the Arabs, under the parallel of $27^{\circ}$. I furpect Abulfeda is wrong; and that Ptolemy is nearer the truth, when he alows one hundred and twenty-three miles, (or one hundred and five corrected) for the diftance of the Great Oafis from Ptolemais on the Nile, in the direction of Weft, fomething Southwardly. Then Edrifi allows only nine days between Sant-rie and El Wah; whereas the fcite of the Temple of Jupiter Ammon, by the above authorities, fhould be, according to my apprehenfion, at leaft twelve days from El Waн. But we are young in African Geography : and as I have faid before, the data furnihhed by Arrian, Strabo, and Pliny, may fatisfy us.

The defcription of the Oa/is (or Ifland in the midft of the fandy Defart) which contained the Temple, is pretty generally known : but for the fake of thofe who may not recollect the particulars, I have extracted the following account.

Arrian fays, that it is not more than forty fladia in extent; Diodorus fifty; fay, fix or feven miles. All accounts agree, that it has one or more fountains of water; and that it was planted with divers kinds of fruit trees: Arrian particularly notices the Palm and Olive. What appeared to be a very great natural curiofity, was, a fountain, which according to Arrian, (whofe account is the leaft extravagant) varied in its temperature, in a greater degree than any other that has been heard of: that is, it was very warm, or hot, at midnight; very cold in the heat of the day. I prefume thefe phænomena will not appear very extraordinary to thofe, who confider, that a deep-feated fpring will preferve a mean degree of temperature at all feafons: fo that, in effect, it was the atmofphere that underwent the change; and with it, the bodies of thofe who made the obfervations.

The Temple was furrounded by a triple wall, forming three diftinct quarters or divifions; one of which was appropriated to the ufe of the Monarch. In the time of Herodotus, when probably the Temple was in its glory, the dominions of the Ammonites reached within ten days journey of the City of Thebes: the people were a colony of Egyptians and Ethiopians, and fpoke a mixed language, (Herod. Book III.) Ammon, or Hammon, was the Egyptian name of Jupiter; and the image of the god, fimilar fimilar to that at Thebes; that is, it had the head of a Ram. (Book IV.)

In the time of Strabo, about four hundred and fifty years after Herodotus, the Temple was almoft deferted ; as the Oracle was grown out of fafhion.

It is probable that fome remains either of the triple wall, or of the Temple, may be found at this day; although the materials may have undergone a different kind of arrangement. The tranfport of the materials acrofs the Defart could only have been accomplifhed by the ftrong impulfe of fupertition: and being once collected, nothing but a like caufe could remove them. See-wah appears to be the neareft town to this Oafis; and is probably not more than fix days journey on the North Eaft of it: the fpring, together with the ruins of the Temple, and the triple wall, might afcertain the fpot, if the curiofity of the prefent age demanded it.

[^19]$$
f x+182
$$

[^0]:    * Ben Alli, a native of Morocco, who was lately in England, and of whom an account is given in the Introduction to Chapter IV. relates, that in proceeding from Fezzan to Gharien, on his way to Tripoli, he was met by feveral parties of Arabs, who were robbers by profeffion, and who rendered the rout fo dangerous, that every individual in the caravan was obliged to carry a gun, a brace of piftols, and a yatagan or fabre. He defcribes the country as partially cultivated ; and remarks, that it is furnifhed with few fprings, and is wholly deftitute of rivers.
    By his account, the diftance from Fezzan to Gharien is that of a journey of fixteen days.
    He reprefents the rout from Gharien to Tripoli as a fandy defart, and its length as that of a feven days journey.

[^1]:    * The people are of a deep fwarthy complexion.

[^2]:    * To the fe fentiments of conftant regard and of deet veneration for their King, bis acknowledged defcent from the Propbet bas undoubtedly contributed: for fuch, if united to the temporal power, is the effeci of this claim to religious autbority, that in Morrocco, when in the bour of bis werath the fword of the Emperor is drawn, the fubmifive victims whom cbance or official attendance on the Court prefents to bis fury, fretch forth their necks with filent and bumble acquiefcence; perfectly convinced that the ftroke of death, when given by fo facred a band, is an inflant admiffion to Paradife.

[^3]:    * In Morrocco, as in Fezzan, the Founder of the reigning fanily was indebted for the diaddem to the refpect and reverence wwbich the title of Shereef beforws.

[^4]:    * From the appearance of the fuppofed berries, there is reafon to fufpect that they belong to the clafs of leguminous plonts, and are in fait two Species of peafe.

[^5]:    * The drefs of the greatelt part of the people is compofed of fhirts of blue cotton, which is manufactured in the country; of a red cap, which is imported from Tripoli; and of a white mullin turban, which is brought from Cairo by the pilgrims who return through that City from Mecca. Nofe-rings of gold are worn by the principal people as a mark of diftinction.

[^6]:    * The country abounds in different fpecies of fruit trees, but that which produces the date is not of the number.

[^7]:    * Horfes and horned cattle, goats and fheep, and cameis, are the common animals of the country.

[^8]:    F In form, the houfes are fimilar to thofe of Tripoli.

[^9]:     Bornoo is fituated in a flat country, on the banks of a fmall river.

[^10]:    * Bornoo is furrounded by a wall, on which, however, there are no guards.

    Ben Alli,

[^11]:    * A. fmall quantity of gold duft is produced in Bornoo; but the principal medium of exchange confifts of pieces of a metal which has fome refemblance to tin.

    Bem Allig

[^12]:    * The language of the common people of Bornoo, though different from, has a frong refemblance to that of the neighbouring Negros, and is very unlike the Arabic, in which, however, the Nobles and principal families converfe.

    The art of writing is known among them, and they are taught to exprefs the Bornoo tongue in the characters of the Arabic.

    > Ben Allif

[^13]:    * Bornoo is governed by a King, who takes the title of Sultan.

[^14]:    * The Sultan of Bornoo commands a vaft army of horfemen, and is a much rore powerful Monarch than the Emperor of Morrocco.

    Ben Alli.

[^15]:    $ The Sultan of Bornou is continually at war with the various idolatrous tribes of Blacks who border on his dominions. Thofe who are taken prifoners are fold to the Arabs, and this traffic conftitutes the principal commerce of the country.

    Slaves are every day brought to him, for the acquifition of this fort of plunder is his conftant occupation.

[^16]:    * The drefs of the people of Fullan (a country to the Weft of Cafhna) refembles the cloth of which the plaids of the Scotch Highlanders are made.

[^17]:    *The goods imported by the Merchants of Fezzan, confift of Slaves-in which they have a great trade,
    Gold Duft,
    Ivory,
    Oftrich Feathers,
    Senna-which is brought from the neighbouring countries, European goods of various fpecies, from Tripoli。

[^18]:    * Teuchira was fituated near the prefent Tolemata; antiently Ptolemaiso

[^19]:    March, I790.

